Socialite Loses Crash Award

Must Pay Accident Victim $18,500

MRS. OLIVIA MORGAN HALLOWELL

Harlan Kingsbury of Braintree today was awarded $18,500 in an auditor's report in a suit for $50,000 against Mrs. Olivia Morgan Hallowell, Dover socialite and chum of Miss Ethel du Pont, fiancee of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr.

Kingsbury's suit was based on injuries suffered on October 3, 1934, when Mrs. Hallowell's automobile was in collision with a motorcycle operated by the plaintiff's brother, Dean Kingsbury. Harlan was riding on a rear seat.

"CRASH INEXCUSABLE"

Dean Kingsbury was killed and the plaintiff was so severely injured that he was confined to a hospital for more than a year. Mrs. Gertrude Kingsbury, mother of the two men, also sought $50,000 as administratrix of Dean's estate, but her claim was denied.

Auditor William H. Hitchcock of Dedham superior court, who made the finding, found that there was negligence on both sides and on this basis, he refused Mrs. Kingsbury's appeal for damages. He said:

"There was no excuse for this collision on a wide, straight stretch of road and under existing conditions.

"Both operators should have seen the other and avoided the collision. The accident was caused by joint negligence."

"DROVE WITHOUT CARE"

In commenting on Mrs. Hallowell's testimony, Auditor Hitchcock remarked:

"The vagueness and inaccuracy of her statement tends to indicate that she was driving automatically without attention to her surroundings."

Mrs. Hallowell is the daughter of the wealthy Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence W. Morgan of Dedham and was married to a Milton man a year ago.

Miss du Pont was one of her bridesmaids and had stayed at the Hallowell home in Dover several times while visiting young Roosevelt during his illness here.

Defense counsel indicated that an appeal would be taken from the finding.

G-MEN QUIZ KIDNAP SUSPECTS

FIND BONES IN EVERETT CELLAR

'BREAK' NEAR IN HUNT FOR KIDNAPER

Los Angeles Jan. 18 (INS)—A score of G-men concentrated here today, questioning two suspects in the kidnap-murder of 10-year-old Charles Mattson in Tacoma, Wash.

Indications of a major break in the case were seen here with the arrival of Harold Nathan, field general for the Federal Department of Justice agents, and half a dozen agents who had been in the Northwest.

One suspect gave his name as Joseph Mihelich, 25. He was apprehended in a hobo "jungle" near Culver City, Cal. Officers said he answered the description of the kidnaper. In his duffle bag, officers said, were a boy's sweater and newspaper clippings of the kidnaping and murder.

The other suspect was seized by G-men who refused to reveal his name.

G-Men Here Told Of New "Suspect"

G-men here were notified that a man who arrived by bus from New York closely resembled the kidnaper-slayer of 10-year-old Charles Mattson in Tacoma, Wash.

Efforts were immediately begun to try to trace the bus passenger, who is believed to have continued on from Boston to Portland, Me.

The report to the local branch

Girl's Purse Also Buried In Cement

Finding of bones and a little girl's pocketbook today under a cement patch in an Everett cellar gave police a gruesome mystery to fathom.

Whether the bones are those of a human has not been determined, but the pocketbook—a small mesh-bag—caused police to adopt a tentative murder theory.

The bones were found in the cellar of a three-family house in Central avenue, Everett, by Samuel Cacciola, occupant of one of the apartments.

BROTHERS MAKE FIND

Several chunks of charred wood were also found mingled with the same grit and debris in which the bones were discovered.

Cacciola was digging in the cellar to drain off water which was flooding the floor.

He chose a place where the cement was crumbling and he noticed it looked newer than the rest of the cellar floor. As he dug into the dirt he uncovered a few bones.

He told his brother, Charles, of Essex street, Malden, and they decided to investigate further before notifying police. They then came across a small chain and attached to it was a meshbag.

UNAWARE OF PATCH

They went far enough to find out that under the debris was more cement, apparently forming the bottom of a drain which was made when he original cellar floor was laid.

Herman Neax of Wilbur street, Everett, who had owned the house for three years, said he had never had the floor patched in that manner. The occupants of the top floor have lived there 16 years and they also were unaware of it.

DINNER DEATH BAFFLES N. Y. DETECTIVES

New York, Jan. 18 (AP) — "Murder in the ball room," a real life thriller enacted in stately old Manhattan Opera House before a banquet crowd of 1500, was as far as ever from settlement today, despite feverish activity of police.

Right out of a story book could have come the situation.

Scores of police and detectives, answering an alarm that hasn't yet been traced, found Frank Cicero, 3, of Stamford, Ct., dying on the floor of the Glass Pail Room of the sixth floor of the theater now housing Max Reinhardt's huge religious production, "The Eternal Road."

Blood from three stab wounds soaked the starched shirt of Cicero's evening clothes as he lay under a table in the northwest corner of the hall where the grand crowd was honoring Barney Shapiro, executive director of the Affiliated Ladies Apparel Carriers Association and president as well of the Garment Truckmen's Benevolent Association of New Jersey.

CROWD IN PANIC

Men were milling about, overturning chairs, and women in evening clothes screamed as they crowded away from the swift melee in which Cicero was stabbed.

A dance orchestra, just having finished a salute to Toastmaster Grover Whalen, president of New York's 1939 World Fair, was playing frantically, trying to keep down the panic.

Immediately, Inspector Michael F. McDermott, in charge of the police, ordered all exits locked, and had the drummer roll out a call for attention. His detectives seat-

Curley Raps Hurley

Says 'Economy' Hits Little Men

By JACK CONWAY

Miami, Fla., Jan. 18—Former Governor James M. Curley told me today he does not intend to be drawn into a controversy with Governor Charles F. Hurley at this time.

"If I were to say anything against Governor Hurley's policies," said the former governor, "it would be charged that my objections were purely personal. Anything I might say in behalf of anybody would be lost sight of in what would be termed a personal dispute.

"I am, of course, sorry to learn that 20 or 30 persons employed at comparatively small salaries of $1500 a year in the office of the state unemployment commission have been discharged.

"Some of these people may have to go on welfare rolls. There will be little saving to the state.

Roosevelt, Minton Discuss Curb on Supreme Court

Washington, Jan. 18 (AP)—Senator Minton (D Ind) said after a White House conference today that President Roosevelt would hold a conference soon on possible legislation dealing with the Supreme Court.

The Indianan said he had discussed generally the question of the court with the President, but was not at liberty to disclose details.

He said he himself would favor a bill requiring at least seven of the nine members of the court to concur before an act of Congress could be held invalid.

"That is one way we can obtain legislation we have been seeking," Minton remarked.

"Everything we have been fighting to get around today was the result of five-to-four or six-to-three decisions."

Hitler-Vatican Pact Shaped By Pope

By FRANK GERVASI

Vatican City, Jan. 18 (INS)—Concentrating all his remaining energies of diplomatic negotiations toward a reconciliation between the Vatican and Germany, Pope Pius insisted on carrying on today despite a sleepless, pain-wracked night.

Fatigued by lengthy conferences in which he participated yesterday, the Pontiff heard mass today, breakfasted and received Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Lauri, chief Vatican confessioner, and Msgr. Tardini, under secretary of state.

Although it was learned the Pope passed a bad night, Vatican officials gave out the usual statement that his condition remained "unchanged."

With the revelations of the Reich-Vatican negotiations, it was learned a new concordat or a supplementary one strengthening German guarantees that the 20,000,000 catholics under Nazi rule will not be persecuted is being formulated.

Vatican circles envision the agreement along these lines:

1—Catholic children in Germany will be permitted to attend parochial schools.

2—Rights of bishops and high Catholic officials to publish pastoral letters will be restored.

3—Catholic newspapers and magazines banned by the Nazis will be reinstated.

STRIKE PEACE FAILS, MOTOR HEADS BOLT

BULLETIN

New York, Jan. 18 (INS)—The stock market weakened shortly after noon today on news of the break-up of the General Motors strike conference. General Motors and Chrysler common stock prices tumbled $3 a share each, while the steels fell in sympathy.

By PAUL BENTON

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Detroit, Jan. 18—Peace negotiations between striking auto workers and General Motors officials broke down almost as soon as they started today, in a welter of charges and countercharges.

William S. Knudsen, executive vice-president of General Motors at noon entered the conference room where union officials had been waiting for him for 25 minutes. He was accompanied by Donaldson Brown, chairman of General Motors finance committee, and John Thomas Smith, counsel.

Five minutes later reporters saw the General Motors officials, accompanied by C. E. Wilson, vice-president, and Harry W. Anderson, director of labor relations, stalk from the conference room.

200,000 MEN IDLE

Shortly afterward a statement was issued by General Motors, declaring it would not negotiate while any of its plants were occupied by sit-down strikers.

Almost immediately after General Motors officials had left, Homer S. Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, announced formally that the negotiations were off.

Girl's Slap Costs Boy A Tonsil

Hyannis, Jan. 18 (AP)—Four-year-old Louis Janard was minus his tonsils today. One was absent-off when a girl playmate gave him a smart slap while he was sucking a lollypop, the other was removed by a physician.

When Louis and his little girl friend got into a mixup, presumably over the lollypop, she struck him, the physician reported, causing the stick attached to the candy to shear off one of his tonsils. After the youngster spat out the tonsil the physician advised removal of the other.

"The boy needed the operation anyway," the doctor commented.

Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm Much Better

Berlin, Jan. 18 (AP)—Associates of the Hohenzollern family said today former Kaiser Wilhelm, living at Doorn, The Netherlands, was recovering from a cold and his condition was "not alarming."

The former German Emperor, they declared, was feeling much better after treatment for the attack of chills he suffered last week while chopping wood in damp, raw weather.

Threats of a march on the State House by several hundred discharged Quabbin reservoir workers cause da hurry call this afternoon for state police reinforcements for the regular capitol guards.

Lieutenant John F. McLaughlin and six troopers were raced to Beacon Hill from the Framingham barracks. Two of them were assigned to the governor's office. The others were stationed in Doric Hall, behind the main entrance to the State House.

They reports that caused the roll were to the effect that a mass demonstration had been planned and that so many would participate in it that disorder might develop.

ROOSEVELT INAUGURATION CROWD FILLS CAPITAL

300,000 WILL WITNESS HISTORIC FESTIVITIES

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

Washington, Jan. 18 (US)—Gay crowds today began arriving in the capital for a tumultuous second inauguration of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The city is bedecked with flags and bunting. A holiday spirit prevails in contrast to the sombre, tense atmosphere of March 4, 1933 when Mr. Roosevelt first took the presidential oath of office.

At the White House today the President labored on his second inaugural address, to be delivered at the capitol plaza Wednesday noon.

It is expected to be an appeal to capital and labor to join hands in the march toward prosperity. It will emphasize peace and good will not only in foreign relations but in the domestic life of the nation as well.

REVEALING ADDRESS

The address also, it is believed, will reveal the President's ideas more clearly as to federal economies and the plan to secure a balanced budget by 1938.

Close advisers speculated whether the President, in discussing social welfare program, would raise the issue of an additional amendment in case further Supreme Court rulings on hours of work and rates of wages are adverse.

This year, for the first time in history, Vice-President Garner will take his oath of office on the same platform with the President and at the same time.

Always before, the oath to the vice-president has been administered in the Senate chamber, where he is the presiding officer.

Officials expected at least 300,000 visitors in the city for Wednesday and admitted the figure might greatly exceed that. Rooting grandstands have been made for 50,000 spectators at the Capitol alone.

A cold rain failed to dampen the enthusiasm of arriving guests today.

HOTELS FILLED

Every available room in every well-known hotel of the city already is reserved, and even the hotels in nearby Alexandria and Baltimore were taking the overflow.

Huge reviewing stands were completed at the Capitol, the White House and along the line of march.

Elaborate precautions have been made for the safety and comfort of visitors. Several hundred extra police-packed men from the forces of Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York have arrived to assist in handling traffic. They were being "shown around" today by local police.

More first-aid stations have been established near the capitol, the White House and along the line of march of the inaugural parade.

The order of events for inauguration day is first the swearing-in ceremony and the inaugural address at the capitol, then the return of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt to the White House, where they will have luncheon.

After this the President will go to the reviewing stand, in front of the White House, where he will watch the parade.

Only regular military units will be in the line of march, civilian groups being barred. It will take the parade two hours to pass the White House reviewing stand.

At the close of the parade, a tea will be given at the White House for several hundred guests. Governors of many states will be in Washington for the event, and parties and receptions were being given by state societies in their hotels.

Garner Must Dress Up, but He'll Sleep

Washington, Jan. 18 (AP)—Vice-President Garner anchored himself today a safe distance from the inauguration's social activities.

"You can say for me," declared the plain-spoken Texan, "that I have no social plans and won't have any. I'm going to bed at 9 o'clock this week, as usual."

His habitual cigar rakishly askew, he said his only concession to the inauguration would be in the sartorial line.

"Oh, yes," he said, "I'll have to wear those fancy pants and one of those coats. There's no way out of that, I suppose. The occasion demands them."

Roosevelt's Health at Peak

Washington, Jan. 18 (AP)—Four trying years in the White House have left President Roosevelt physically as strong as when he first entered it.

"Without question the President's physical condition is excellent," Captain Ross T. McIntire, his naval physician, said today.

"Outside of the fact that he is four years older, there is not a thing to worry about."

'Hickory' Watch, Old Bible

By MARIE MANNING
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 18—President Roosevelt will carry his famous mascot, Andrew Jackson's watch and chain, at his second inauguration, Wednesday. He wore it on election day . . . the stand from which he will review the parade is a reproduction of Andrew Jackson's home, "The Hermitage," near Nashville, Tenn.

The President will take the oath of office from an old Dutch Bible which has been in his family nearly two centuries. It is the same Bible on which he took the oath four years ago. If Wednesday is rainy, the precious Roosevelt heirloom will not be taken out of its old Bible box.

It is said that Mrs. James Roosevelt will be the only woman ever to see her son take the Presidential oath at two inaugurations.

Mrs. Roosevelt's inaugural wardrobe happens to be in the colors of the flag. To the capitol to see her husband take the oath, she will wear a dark blue wool crepe, very simply made.

The red gown in which she will greet the thousand and more guests who are coming to tea, after the parade, is a lovely creation, floor length, with Persian band embroidery.

At the dinner preceding the inaugural evening events, the President's wife has chosen a very pale silvery blue velvet, the drapery falling from the shoulders edged with fox fur dyed blue to match the gown.

Seven wives of former presidents have been invited to Franklin D. Roosevelt's second inaugural. Only one, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, accepted the invitation. Surviving wives of former presidents are Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, Mrs. Grover Cleveland, now Mrs. T. J. Preston, Jr., Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. William Howard Taft, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Herbert Hoover. Herbert Hoover is the sole surviving ex-president.

HURLEY TO GO TO INAUGURAL

Governor and Mrs. Charles F. Hurley leave tonight at 9 o'clock for Washington for the inauguration of President Roosevelt and the attendant festivities.

Accompanying them will be his civilian aid, Henry K. Cushing of Brookline, brother-in-law of James Roosevelt; Mrs. Cushing, Frank O'Donnell of Needham, another civilian aid, and Mrs. O'Donnell.

Mr. and Mrs. Felix Carr of Peabody, General Charles H. Cole, Major Ralph W. Robart and Major John M. Whaley, military aides, and Lieutenant Edward Arcand, chief of staff.

The state's chief executive will pay his own expenses on the trip.

"It may shock you to know that I am paying my own way," the governor told reporters.

Bank Fixes Wrong House, Costs $500

Newburyport, Jan. 18—Disclosure was made today that for the past three weeks the Newburyport Cooperative Bank has had a crew of men repairing a Warren street house that it does not own.

John F. Leary, head of the C. Leary & Company building works, admitted this morning that he owns the house that the bank was fixing up.

"I guess the joke is on the bank," commented Leary today, as he listed all the work that was done by the bank's workmen.

"They put on a new roof and installed new gutters," he said. "They also built a chimney and put in cellar windows. Clapboards were put on one side and the house was painted on three sides. The interior was improved."

Mayor Congratulates Contest Winners

ERNEST SINGER | ALEX MAHFUZ | EILEEN McPHERSON | MAYOR MANSFIELD | MARY McANULTY | CHARLES SAVAGE, JR.

Tomorrow morning at nine. That's the time the New Haven train leaves South Station carrying ten girls and ten boys from New England towns to Washington for the inaugural. They are all winners in the Boston Evening American historic Washington tour contest. They will remain in the capital city until Friday morning. Mayor Mansfield congratulated the group at his office in City Hall. The Boston winners, from left to right, are: Ernest Singer, Alex Mahfuz, Eileen McPherson, Mary McAnulty and Charles Savage, Jr.

STUDENTS ON 4-DAY INAUGURAL TRIP

Tomorrow morning at nine. That's the time.

Boston's South Station. That's the scene.

Twenty happy boys and girls aboard the Pullman "special" bound for Washington. That's the story.

Behind them, the record of being best in a contest that ten thousand entered.

Before them, the prospect of four days of heavenly happiness.

All about them, as pleased as they, state officials, town and city officials, school officials and smiling mothers and fathers.

Such will be the gala departure of the Boston Evening American Roosevelt Inaugural Tour Competition winners for the colorful Washington ceremonies Wednesday.

Without a stop, with every moment a new, glorious thrill, these ten boys and ten girls, many never away from home before, will speed toward the national capital.

MET BY AUTOS

There, automobiles will meet the train and carry the party through historic streets to their hotel.

Immediately 20 dreams will become reality. The first Inaugural dinner will be served. Men and women prominent in the nation's affairs will attend. And there'll be speeches, singing and dancing.

Next morning, early, the students will sway for the Inauguration scene to take their places in reserved seats only a few feet from the section occupied by Supreme Court justices, their wives and guests.

BIG DINNER DANCE

The President, his family and cabinet will dine in full view. The boys and girls will see him and hear him and watch his every move.

Wednesday evening, students and chaperones will be guests of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, nationally-known society and newspaper woman. For them, at her beautiful home she has arranged a dinner-dance. And men and women of world prominence will attend.

Thursday morning, following breakfast at their hotel, the boys and girls will enter automobiles for one of the most enjoyable events of their tour—visits to the principal public buildings, including the White House.

And, it's very likely, they may see President Roosevelt himself, for he has taken a personal interest and delight in the coming of the young men and women to his inauguration.

From the White House the party will go to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, there to see the actual making of internal revenue stamps, postage stamps, foreign passports, national bank notes and currency.

SEE OLD MUSEUM

Next will be the Pan-American Union, one of the world's most beautiful buildings. A monument to the unity of interest of Pan-America.

Then, the boys and girls will go to the Old National Museum, where all modern inventions, such as the first locomotive, first airplane and wonders too numerous to mention, are housed.

The fifth stop will be the United States Capitol, center of all our national affairs, set majestically amid picturesque grounds. First, the party will visit the Senate Chamber. Later, the House of Representatives. And, finally, the huge rotunda and galleries.

Last on the morning's program will be a tour of the Congressional Library—finest library in the entire world.

But greatest of all, perhaps, will be the occasion when the young people stand before the ORIGINAL draft of the Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence.

TRIP TO ANNAPOLIS

Dinner will be served at the hotel and an interesting program of entertainment will follow.

Then will come the trip that all the boys and girls are anticipating for days, the greatest of joys—a long automobile ride to Annapolis, capital of Maryland and home of the United States Military Academy, where four of the party have relatives.

Thursday night, at their hotel the students will enjoy another dinner-dance, meeting men and women outstanding in the affairs of the nation and journalism.

And Friday morning, the gala program near its close, the students—reluctantly, perhaps—will again board their Pullman "special" for the return trip to Boston.

In Washington, the party will meet Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, attending the Inauguration. Saturday, he invited the five Boston winners to his office, congratulated them and promised to be with them in the national capital.

Also with the party one evening will be Congressman George J. Bates and Mayor of Salem. Congratulating Miss Ethel A. Walker, Salem winner, Sunday, he too said he would meet the boys and girls in Washington and do his bit to make their stay enjoyable.

Miss Mary E. Colbeth, 17, of Bourne, Cape Cod, one of the inaugural tour contest winners, will be unable to attend because of the death of her mother, Mrs. Harold L. Colbeth.

In Miss Colbeth's place, Miss Carolyn Shaw of 90 Warren road, Framingham, student at Framingham High School, was chosen to make the trip.

Reopen Hospital As Flu Increases

Dr. William H. Keeler, municipal health commissioner, today ordered the reopening of the old detention hospital in Southampton street because of the continued increase in the number of persons admitted to Boston City Hospital suffering from pneumonia, influenza and grippe.

The detention hospital has been closed for the past three years.

'Election Court' Urged by McGlue

Charles H. McGlue, former chairman of the Massachusetts Ballot Law Commission and one-time head of the Democratic State Committee, advocated before a legislative committee today creation of an election court consisting of three judges with full power to handle all election disputes.

McGlue declared "the real trouble is with the ballot law commission and the way it was set up by the Legislature. It was given no particular powers by the Legislature, and it can't compel a witness to appear."

McGlue opposed a bill offered by Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook to force the present ballot law commission to cite prompt decisions.

RUSSIA BLOCKS INTERVENTION IN SPAIN

By the Associated Press

Peacemakers struggled in new but still trying circumstances to keep Spain's civil war isolated today—the half-year point of conflict.

Battle between Fascist insurgents and a Socialist government raged on, from Madrid to the Mediterranean's two coasts.

The international non-intervention committee considered a revised scheme to blockade Spain with neutral above observers and a six-power warship patrol of peace.

But Soviet Russia formally opposed any non-intervention action that was not collective and Germany and Italy, on the other side, gave the same impression by their silence.

ISOLATION OF RUSSIA

The Fascist powers did, however, indicate their desires for a new Locarno accord with Britain, France and Belgium to preserve the territorial status quo of Europe.

But that would isolate Russia, France's ally.

Fascists bid in the seventh month of war by claiming capture of Marbella, gateway to the government port of Malaga on the south Mediterranean coast. One of their ships tried an attack on Barcelona, on the east shore, but was driven away by coastal batteries.

GREECE REARMING

The insurgents outside Madrid bombarded the city anew, but some of their number were trapped in a dynamited building at the capital's edge.

At Valencia, the Spanish government sought means to increase needed imports.

Russia's officially-inspired press charged Germany with trying to make Czechoslovakia "a second Spain" by spreading tales of "Sovietization" of the intervening Republic.

Socialists to Open War Recruiting Office Here

Greater Boston Socialists will open an office at 86 Leverett street, West End, on January 29, with the idea of recruiting soldiers for the government in the Spanish civil war. The aim is to induce 500 men from New England to join the fight against the Fascist forces in Spain.

Plans are under way today in place David Udell, Greater Boston organizer of the Socialist party, in charge of recruiting.

All persons who call at the office between now and January 29 will be told to:

"Go to New York if you wish to fight for the Spanish government. You can sign up at 21 East 17th street."

One hundred men have been sent from Boston to New York during the last few days, it is reported.

No special inducements are being made to prospective fighters at the Boston office, it was said. They were told they will be given transportation to Spain and a small amount of cash.

Leaders of the Communist party in Boston deny they are openly recruiting for the Spanish cause. They admit that many of their members have volunteered to go, and that these include seamen who can no longer sail on American vessels because of inability to prove they are citizens of the United States.

British Debt Envoy Runciman Here

Ostensibly on a "social tour" of the United States, but presumably here to sound out American sentiment on the war debt question, Walter Runciman, president of the British Board of Trade, arrived in Boston today.

He is scheduled to meet President Roosevelt over the week-end, probably to act as a White House guest. In diplomatic circles, it is said, that he has been empowered by England to act as unofficial negotiator on the debt question.

Sir Walter was greeted on the Anchor liner Caledonia by a party of Boston shippers who sailed to meet the ship at quarantine. They met the Caledonia on the customs tug Mackinac.

It is widely believed that the distinguished visitor has been authorized to speak on the international debt subjects of international war debts, on trade and money stabilization and similar topics.

Great Britain is already $786,000,000 in arrears on its war debt payments and should a compromise be reached, it is thought that France would follow suit. Sir Walter's visit is to be followed by one from Dr. Otto Niemeyer, director of the Bank of England.

Prison Fugitive Held in $10,000

Frank Ashley Aiden, 37, who escaped from a life sentence in Idaho State Prison and came to Boston to marry under an assumed name, today was held in $10,000 bail on a fugitive from justice warrant and bound over in the April term of the Norfolk grand jury on charges of attacking two Stoughton women.

Aiden was arraigned in Dedham district court before Judge E. Dwight Fullerton.

His wife was not in court.

Boston U.S. Prisoner Escapes

ARMANDO PAGLIARO

Armando Pagliaro, alias Armando Bianchi, 36 years old, of East Boston, sentenced to seven years in Lewisburg Penitentiary last Thursday for dope peddling, escaped from federal guards in New York city today.

According to information forwarded to authorities here, the prisoner nonchalantly stepped out of the auto that was taking him to the Pennsylvania prison and vanished in the Manhattan crowds.

The machine had broken down in traffic, New York state police said, and Deputy U. S. Marshal Joseph Pino and Guard Russell Wenberg were trying to make emergency repairs.

DESCRIPTION BROADCAST

There was another prisoner in the car, but he stayed there. His name was not mentioned in the message.

An alarm for Pagliaro was radioed through New York and neighboring states and his description was broadcast.

Attempts to reach U. S. Marshal John J. Murphy were unavailing. Federal officials here said that he was also en route to Lewisburg with Thomas Avino of Huntington avenue, Back Bay, another dope convict.

IN $1,000,000 RING

Pagliaro was described as wearing a blue serge suit, dark blue overcoat, felt hat, and black shoes. He is five feet, nine inches tall, weighs about 150 pounds and is of swarthy complexion.

He was one of those arrested in the "million-dollar dope ring" raids a few weeks ago, when Boston police combined with federal agents to seize a score of persons.

Last week he pleaded guilty to charges of narcotic sales and was sentenced to seven years in the federal penitentiary.

Avino was sentenced on similar charges and had planned to wed Miss Sadie Wood of Huntington avenue before going to prison, but postponed the ceremony when he found newspapers had publicized his plans.

OLIVE OIL FRAUD DRIVE ON

Indictments against at least five or six men, it is understood, will be sought from the Federal grand jury, which began sittings today, in probe of an alleged $1,000,000 olive oil and teaseed ring.

Discovery that the olive oil adulteration ring was at work both here and in New York was made some months ago when a young New York chemist, J. E. Fiteloa, succeeded in devising a chemical reaction which would show the presence of cheap-priced teaseed in olive oil.

With his discovery, work of a ring which allegedly had been flooding the market with cheap "olive oil" was blocked.

KEKY METHOD

Millions of gallons of tea-seed are known to have been palmed off on the unsuspecting public as olive oil.

The method pursued by the racketeers was to advertise the product as pure olive oil at a reduced price.

A considerable number of dealers are alleged to have been selling the product.

The game was to pour in the teased oil and a small amount of pure olive oil to give it the color and odor of olive oil.

SUBPOENA WITNESSES

The Boston investigation is in charge of Chief Inspector Cyril C. Sullivan.

Of 15 or 20 witnesses subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury today several are connected with the Italian Chamber of Commerce of New York city, the Olive Oil Association of New York city, refiners and dealers.

Last something? Phone Miss James at Liberty 4000. She will try to help you recover your loss.

WRIGHT'S Air Record QUERIED

SIFT EARLIER HOP CLAIMS

By Associated Press

A Harvard economics teacher whose hobby is aviation history today advocated a congressional probe to determine for all time whether the Wright brothers or an obscure Austrian immigrant made the first genuine airplane flight.

The professor, youthful Dr. John B. Crane, conceded he was stumped after many months of private investigation into the claims of the Austrian, Gustave Whitehead, once a night watchman in Bridgeport, Conn. Dr. Crane asserted in an interview he wanted a group of aviation experts named and financed by Congress to sift the matter which has flared to the controversial stage in the past two years.

Crude Contraption

The Wright brothers, Orville and Wilbur, made their famous flight at Kitty Hawk, N. C., on December 17, 1903. A monument has been erected honoring their achievement.

But said Dr. Crane, much evidence has been discovered to support the view that Whitehead went up in a crude contraption as early as 1900 in the vicinity of Bridgeport, to become the first man in America to fly.

"Although there is a substantial body of evidence to support the Whitehead claims," the professor said, "there is some conflicting evidence which is hard to reconcile with the claims. The matter is of sufficient importance to warrant a thorough investigation, and I heartily urge that Congress authorize an official investigation of the Whitehead claims and appropriate sufficient funds to make a thoroughgoing probe possible."

Widow Living

"Whitehead himself died in obscurity in 1927, but his widow and two children are still living in Bridgeport."

Wilbur Wright also is dead. Orville lives in retirement.

"There are several people still living in Bridgeport who testified to me under oath they had seen Whitehead make flights along the streets of Bridgeport in the early 1900's. One former resident of the city, Junius Hayworth, now an engineer of a motor car company in Detroit, testified he had personally witnessed a one and a half mile airplane flight made by Whitehead on August 14, 1901, more than two years before the Wright brothers made their first flight."

Reports Flight

Dr. Crane exhibited a photostatic copy of a Bridgeport, newspaper, dated Sunday, August 18, 1901, telling of the flight, which Harwich testified. The story related that Whitehead flew about 10 minutes at an altitude of 40 to 50 feet in the early morning hours and landed safely.

The paper described the plane as generally resembling a bat. Wings were made of bamboo poles covered with muslin. A tail flap-lated ascent and descent. Also, the story related, there were two engines, one of 10 horse-power to run the machine on wheels along the ground and the other, 20 horse-power, to work the propellers in flight.

MRS. KENNEDY IN GEM QUIZ

Worcester, Jan. 18—Mrs. William J. Kennedy, wife of the Boston merchant, testified today before the grand jury here, in connection with the $125,000 gem robbery at her Southboro home last November.

Another witness was Miss Emma Green, Negro maid, who was with Mrs. Kennedy when the robbers broke in.

Both women were bound by the masked gang and they have attempted to identify a prisoner, Samuel Linden of West Newton street, Boston, by his voice and hands.

Linden is now held at the jail here under $50,000 bail on a Westboro district court arraignment. No trial was held in the district court, but the case was continued to give the authorities a chance to have the grand jury pass on the evidence.

Another suspect, Joseph Bellino of Newark, N. J., was arrested last night at Miami, Fla.

Pleads Guilty To Church Thefts

After police had testified that he had confessed to stealing five pocketbooks from worshippers in St. Thomas More Chapel in Franklin street, Aloysius McCann, 21, pleaded guilty to all charges in municipal court today.

He case was continued until Thursday, however, when Special Officer Harvey Yates also told the court that the prisoner had made similar admissions of thefts in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross and in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, South End.

Get Marital Freedom

For the second time, Mrs. Eleanor S. Sawyer of Needham secured a divorce from her husband, John W. Sawyer, but her ten-year-old adopted daughter, Patricia, shown with her mother, stole the limelight in Dedham Probate Court today. Judge Joseph R. McCoole had a private talk with the child before awarding her mother the decree. She charged cruel and abusive treatment.

Mrs. Lillian C. Ryan of Weymouth was granted an uncontested divorce in the same court after 19 years of married life. Since 1934, she testified, her husband did nothing to support her and her three children, who were given in her custody.

Fifteen days after her marriage, her husband ordered her out of the house, Mrs. Jean K. Keenan, an attractive bride of six months, testified in Dedham Probate Court today, where she was granted an uncontested divorce. "He punched me, too," she said.

CHILD Quizzed in DIVORCE

2ND PARTING OF COUPLE

A 10-year-old girl who had accompanied her mother to Dedham probate court to witness her parents' divorce proceedings stole the limelight today during the uncontested session before Judge Joseph R. McCoole.

Departing from the usual routine, the youngster was called to the bench by Judge McCoole following her mother's testimony.

After a few minutes of private conversation, Judge McCoole awarded Mrs. Eleanor S. Sawyer of Needham her second divorce from John W. Sawyer and also gave her custody of the child, Patricia, who had been adopted by the Sawyers.

Mrs. Sawyer testified she was married first in 1921 but secured a divorce three years later. In 1927, she told the court she remarried Sawyer but said "trouble started again three years later."

"He slapped my face, hit me with a book and punched me with his fist," she testified. "Last July he hit me and locked me out of the house."

Attorney for Sawyer filed a stipulation agreeing to pay $100 at once and $7 a week. The court ruled that Sawyer could see his child "at all reasonable times and without interference."

Bride Wins Decree

A bride of six months, an attractive brunette, was given a divorce on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment after she testified she had been ordered out of her house by her husband 15 days after their marriage last July.

She was Mrs. Jean Kellie Keenan, seeking a decree from Wilfred E. Keenan, both of Quincy.

"Three days after my husband ordered me out of the house when he pushed and shook me," she said, "I went back but he was gone.

"A short time later when I was living at the house of my sister I was called outside to a parked car and found my husband in it. He punched me."

Decree Nisi

Mrs. Lillian C. Ryan of Weymouth was granted a decree nisi from Frederick D. Ryan of Quincy on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment and neglect to provide. She was also given custody of their three children, E. Norma, 15, F. Douglas, 16, and Laurie K., 13.

She testified they were married in 1918 but in 1935 her husband broke down the door of her bedroom and struck her.

She said she hadn't lived with him since that time. Since 1934 she told the court, her husband did nothing to support her.

Repair Ship Keel Laid

Sasebo, Japan, Jan. 18 (AP)—Preceded by elaborate ceremonies conducted by Shinto ritualists, the keel of Japan's first floating arsenal was laid today, the Domei (Japanese) News agency reported. The vessel, the Akashi, will serve as a repair ship.

Blonde or Brunette: Your Order, Please?

No need of lonesome evenings or even lonesome afternoons for male students at Boston University. A date bureau may soon be in operation. If you'd like to spend an evening with a tall blonde, just say so. Your order is filled. If a brunette is your wish, a brunette you get. Harold Rase of Pittsfield is being shown the description of a "nifty number." The card was just picked from the "date bureau" file by Eileen Maguire of Cambridge. Louise Shantley of Boston, at right, looks on with a smile.

B. U. YOUTH IN PLEA FOR 'DATE BUREAU'

It takes four years to get a degree at Boston University, but it takes rounds and collegians only a few pounds to get a date.

That is, if a date bureau is established at the urban institution.

All student spinsters and bachelors have to do is register and their social problems will be solved.

If Pat B. U. girls and boys have their way about it, stag lines will become extinct.

There'll be a girl for every boy, and vice-versa.

Said Helen Burgess, blonde college of liberal arts freshman:

"Blind dates have been all right up to this time, but I believe this bureau could be quite an improvement; we might at least meet men with somewhat the same interests."

Eileen Maguire, lovely college of business administration sophomore, remarked:

"It would be convenient for girls whose steady boy friends were not available."

At the college of practical arts and letters, where there is nothing but girls, Louise de Montigny, a sophomore, expressed this opinion:

"We girls are stranded. Speaking generally, a bureau such as this might be great advantage for those who come from out of town. They would have a chance to get acquainted."

Louise Shanley, pert College of Business Administration sophomore commented:

"I think it would nearly double the attendance at university social functions. What's the use of going to a dance without an escort?"

Male students gloated over the prospects.

"Ah, that's just the thing B. U. needs," Harold "Jellybean" Bass, journalism sophomore, exclaimed.

"There's a certain element of adventure in registering for a date with a girl you never saw. Why, the idea can't be beat for a solution to blind dates."

Gordon Hughes, School of Education junior, added:

"No doubt this plan would be an excellent idea, especially for those who are seeking and have little time to make school friendships."

Meanwhile, university officials considered the feasibility of such project.

Dog Shot in Paw for Fourth Time

"Tippy," the collie dog of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Doyle of Chatham street, Lynn, and all his friends were rejoicing again today that his mysterious human—or inhuman—enemy cannot match his marksmanship with his determination.

For the fourth time in five weeks "Tippy" came limping home with a rifle bullet lodged in his paw.

A veterinary, who removed the bullets, said they were fired from a .22 calibre rifle each time.

Lynn police and officials of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals joined in an attempt to uncover "Tippy's" assailant.

200 Me. Strikers Return to Jobs

Portland, Me., Jan. 18 (AP)—Textile machinery hummed at the Cabot Manufacturing Company plant in Brunswick today as 200 workers returned after a two-week strike, while labor troubles in Skowhegan and Millinocket remained unsettled.

Six hundred strikers refused to resume work at two Somerset shoe company plants in Skowhegan until the management met their 12½ per cent wage increase demand. The Labor Department in Washington assigned a conciliator.

6 Tons of Eggs Spilled in Crash

Geneva, N. Y., Jan. 18 (INS)—Floyd Stenger ruefully contemplated a giant omelet on his front lawn here today. Six tons of eggs, spilled following a highway accident, were spread over the yard.

The eggs, 136,800 in all, were aboard a truck bound from Anderson, Ind., for Brooklyn, N. Y., when the truck collided with an auto.

Devaluation Wins O. K. in House

Washington, Jan. 18 (INS)—The House coinage committee today ordered a favorable report on the administration bill continuing the $2,600,000,000 gold stabilization fund and President Roosevelt's authority to devalue the dollar an additional 10 per cent.

Administration leaders plan to pass the extension measure in the House tomorrow.

G-Men Probe Power King's Death

"SUICIDE," HIS WIDOW CLAIMS; HER PRINTS FOUND ON GUN

Snow Hill, Md., Jan. 18 (INS)—G-men scientists joined Maryland detectives today in an effort to catalogue as either murder or suicide the death of Clarence J. Trader, 43.

The wealthy power king was found dead through the heart in a house containing only his estranged wife and himself.

Trader's widow, who followed his body almost fearlessly to its grave, said he killed himself.

A coroner's jury said they didn't know who fired the .22-caliber bullet and recommended that the investigation go on.

It went forward today, with all the scientific methods devised by the powerful federal bureau of investigation.

To the G-men's laboratories in Washington went a red-stained and powder-blackened shirt taken from the power king's partially clad body.

The .22-calibre pistol found near his outstretched hands said to bear the widow's fingerprints and the .22-long-calibre pistol bullet extracted from the region of his heart, also went there.

The widow, Mrs. Jeanette Ball Trader, told authorities she and the power king were road-housing the night before the shooting. A bottle of peach brandy and a half a glass of its contents were found at the scene of the shooting.

In his divorce action, which called for an answer by tomorrow, Trader alleged he trapped his wife in a rendezvous with Ab Smith, a neighboring planter, in the Tip Top Inn, a road house near the Virginia line. No answer to the suit had ever been filed.

Authorities said they are seeking the planter for questioning.

Thus far the widow has been interrogated only at the home. No stenographic account has been taken. She said she had fired the pistol early in the evening, aiming it out the window of her husband's car, to "see whether it worked."

She said further she picked it up impulsively when the sound of a shot brought her running to a darkened bed chamber—the one Trader used to occupy, and she glimpsed his form on the floor. But immediately, according to her story, she dropped it back near the hands of the dying man.

All that, Mrs. Trader asserted, would explain perfectly how her fingerprints might have got on the ugly little blue-handled gun.

Seamen at Capital For 'Book' Protest

Washington, Jan. 18 (AP)—More than 1000 bedraggled seamen, many of whom walked here in the rain from Baltimore, gathered here today to protest against what they contend is a bad maritime law.

They planned a march to the Commerce Department to protest that the so-called continuous discharge book is discriminatory against them. The book, provided by a new law, is a complete record of a seaman's employment.

Ind. City Tied Up By Bus, Car Strike

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 17 (AP)—Terre Haute, scene of a paralyzing general strike with martial law a year and a half ago, was without street car or bus service today as employes of the Indiana Railroad struck for a 20 per cent increase in wages.

104 TREMONT STREET—BOSTON

AS I SEE IT

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18—Casual inquiry about the city of Washington indicates that, commercially, a presidential inauguration is scarcely one-two-seven with a coronation.

DAMON RUNYON

Coming up from Florida to bear journalistic witness to the mid-winter political carnival of the Democrats, we were reading the advertisements in a high-toned magazine of homes to rent in London for coronation week.

We judge that times are a little tough for many of the people in England, including members of the nobility, as they are offering to let out rooms all over London town. One viscount is advertising a modest place of 25 principal bedrooms, with 16 bathrooms for $7500 for the week.

As a coronation has some vague relations to an inauguration, we wondered if an analogous situation prevailed in the nation's capital. We asked a hotel keeper about this, mentioning the fee sought by the viscount.

"For that kind of money," the bonifacer said, "Mr. Roosevelt would probably be willing to let out the Executive Mansion for the week, and move to a boarding house."

There'd Be Classy Butlering

We said that it was only fair to mention that a complete staff of attendants goes with the 25 principal bedrooms and 16 baths.

"For that kind of money," the hotel man said, doggedly, "I think Mr. Roosevelt would rent the Executive Mansion, and throw in Senator Robinson, and six congressmen, and 'Uncle Jim' Farley as butlers."

The hotel man said there are quite a number of visiting firemen in Washington from all parts of these United States, but that he couldn't hope to average much better than $3 a day for his rooms, with plenty of squawks going with the rate.

After we had read a few of the advertisements in the high-toned magazine to him, he said he wished we were having a coronation instead of an inauguration, though he added, off the record, that except for the room rent, he doesn't see any difference.

There was an undercurrent of meaning in this crack that convinces us that this hotel keeper will bear watching. He is undoubtedly a Republican, at heart.

If you think the viscount's price for rooms is too steep, you can have a house with seven bedrooms, and three bathrooms, belonging to the Hon. Lady ——— for $5000 for coronation week. We withhold the Hon. Lady's name, because this column requires the regular rate for advertising rooming houses.

A house in London's Edbury street, the property of another Lady Soandso, is practically a steal at $3250 a week, if you take it for three weeks over the coronation. Four bedrooms, and four sitting rooms, in Egerton Gardens, go for the month of the coronation at $1750 a week.

How to Win Bathroom Derby

We rather like this last apportionment of space better than the others. You can have a sitting room while waiting on the bathroom. We judge that in the other houses the late risers have to wait in line in the hall to nail a bath, just as we used to do in that old brownstone front in West 45th street, when we occupied a room with Mr. Jim Howe and Mr. Jennings Sutor.

Mr. Jim Howe, who is Uncle Ed Howe's boy from Atchison, Kansas, was in Moscow for the Associated Press the last we heard, and Mr. Jennings Sutor was out in Portland, Oregon, playing the part of a hermit, and a lot of slush has run through the culverts since then, but surely they remember that room.

They were lads of great gallantry toward the opposite sex, and they kept running second and third in the bathroom stakes to that bow-legged, red-headed gal from the third floor back, until we showed them how to out-maneuver her in the sprint down the hall. We were a mighty fellow in rooming-houseship in those days.

Besides the viscount, and the Hon. Ladies This and That, who are looking for lodgers for coronation week, the Right Hon. Lord ——— is out drumming up trade for a mansion of 19 bedrooms and five bathrooms, not far from London.

He doesn't mention any price, but we imagine it is a stiffish one, as some little acreage is attached to the place. A tenant can raise his own vegetables while waiting on the coronation.

Where the Upkeep Is Frightful

There are many other bewildering bargains on the London market—a two-bedroom flat in West End "with constant hot water," at $250 per week, for two weeks; a five-bedroom flat overlooking Hyde Park at $2500 for coronation week, or $10,000 for the season. No man need go without a roof over his head in London the week the new King is crowned.

It isn't at all surprising to find the noble householders of London so short of ready cash that they are eager to rent out their rooms. Anybody that has had to support the establishments described in the advertisements for any length of time, couldn't be anything else but broke, even if they had the mint running for them.

And please understand we are not trying to make light of the English nobility for seeking to rent out their rooms. It is an honest business, and most respectable. Moreover, as an old-time inmate of rooming houses, we can realize that it must make a roomer feel mighty proud to know that his landlord or landlady is of noble blood.

As we remember, the landlady in that house in West 45th street used to give us to understand that we would be surprised if we knew who she really was. Our vague suspicion, drawn from some of her remarks, that she might be of very distinguished birth, always impressed us no little, and prompted us to keep up fairly well on the rent.

That, and the fact that she could bawl out a delinquent in a voice that could be heard from the Strand to du Pont circle, and with a manner that fairly chilled the blood. Now that we think of it, maybe she used to rent out rooms overlooking Hyde Park for coronations.

King O. K.'s Toast Drunk in Water

London, Jan. 18 (AP)—One may drink King George VI's health in water.

The Moderates so informed the London Temperance Association today. He father and his brother, Edward VIII, had likewise accused prohibitionists "a loyal toast will be honored with equal acceptance in water or any other non-alcoholic beverage."

Governor, Staff Invited to Ball

Governor Hurley and his staff and other state officials are among the guests invited to the 50th annual military ball of Company M, 101st Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, at Hotel Continental, Cambridge, next Friday evening.

9 TO DISCUSS ELECTRICITY FOR AD CLUB

The "March of Electricity" will be presented before the Boston Advertising club tomorrow at its luncheon meeting under the sponsorship of the electrical industry of metropolitan Boston.

Thomas H. Carens, vice-president of the Boston Edison Company, in the role of master of ceremonies, will introduce nine speakers, who will relate the story of electrical progress in various phases of the industry for the 25-year period since 1912. An exhibit of modern home-electric equipment will be used to climax the word pictures of the development of appliances for domestic comfort.

Farns So. Africa In Jewish Crisis

Capetown, Union of South Africa, Jan. 18 (AP)—General J. B. M. Hertzog, South African premier, told the Assembly today there might be bloodshed from growing anti-Jewish feeling, unless steps were taken to halt Jewish immigration.

The statement was made during debate on the aliens bill, which contains, Hertzog said, "protective measures" to restrict Jewish immigration, effectively without bearing the mark of persecution."

Blackmail Death Laid to Chauffeur

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 18 (AP)—C. E. Russell, 56, a mining operator, died today from wounds which Sheriff Joe Bawmi said his chauffeur, James Metzger, admitted inflicting in a blackmail plot.

The sheriff said Metzger confessed shooting his employer and luring him about the country for hours after discovering an absence bond well, where he had intended the disposal of his victim, had been foiled.

A Box-Score for Character:

Reveal He-Women, She-Men by Test

By G. B. LAL
Universal Service Science Writer

New Haven, Jan. 18—In every woman there is something masculine. In every man there is something feminine.

Science has now perfected a psychological yardstick, to be known as the M-F or masculinity-femininity test, to measure exactly how much of each trait is present in any man or woman. This was disclosed here today, by one of the devisers of the test, Dr. Catherine Cox Miles of Yale University.

The senior partner in developing this masculine-feminine test was Prof. Lewis M. Terman of Stanford University. Doctors Terman and Miles have just published the details of their method, and some striking results of tests made in a treatise, "Sex and Personality."

Said Dr. Miles:

"Printed forms are now ready. They can be used for making the tests, by competent persons."

NEW SCIENCE OPENS

The entire M-F test consists of seven different test forms. The person under test records himself or herself, or the score is written down by the examiner.

Tremendously important in medicine, psychiatry and vocational guidance, these tests open a new psychological science, Dr. Miles said.

Some of the strange results obtained by Drs. Terman and Miles, the latter said, were these:

"In a list of well known historical and contemporary personages, from which to select favorites, women show a distinctive preference for famous women, unfortunates, philanthropists. The feminine preference index thus includes such persons as

"Jane Adams, Florence Nightingale, Queen Victoria, Woodrow Wilson, General Cornwallis, Galileo.

"The surprise is that Mohammed and the Duke of Wellington are on the female preference index.

"Males chose successful generals, sports heroes, and defiers of convention, such as Tom Paine, Robert Ingersoll, Judge Ben Lindsay."

Of the seven different test forms used to make scores on intelligence, information, introvert and extrovert types, words association and so on, the most helpful was the emotional test.

Dr. Miles explained that reactions to four emotions are measured: Anger, fear, disgust and pity. On the whole a greater tendency towards emotional response characterized the feminine trait.

The masculine score was low in emotionality, also in censuring others for moral reasons. Females were harder on light offenders, males on heavier ones.

EMOTIONS COUNT

What it means is that if a man is scored as "highly emotional" his marking has strong "feminine qualities." Low or neutral emotionality marks even a woman as "highly masculine."

Contrary to general belief, it was discovered that:

"Men of average or inferior health scored more 'masculine' than those who had superior health. The results for women are just the reverse."

As men grow older their feminine score increases.

Among men pursuing various professions, the highest "masculine" score is made by the engineers. Among women, by graduate practicing nurses. College football players and women athletes also score top grades in "masculinity."

HEBREW UNION HEARS PLEAS FOR PEACE

New Orleans, Jan. 18 (AP)—Jewish leaders gave expression today to their hope in peace and democracy as the forces which will save both Judaism and world civilization from disaster.

Assembled in the annual council of the union of Hebrew congregations, they carried on discussions amid placards proclaiming "war is barbarism" and "peace is patriotism".

Members of the national federation of temple sisterhoods held a peace meeting today under Mrs G. George Fox of Chicago as the only guest after hearing Dr. Lee J. Levinger of Columbus, Ohio, declare yesterday, "The Jew is irrevocably committed to democracy."

FASCISM 'DEADLY FOE'

He asserted:

"Fascism is our deadly foe, exactly as it is the foe of all minorities, economic, political or religious. But it probably would strike us first of all."

Dr. Abba H. Silver of Cleveland, O., who presided, advised "quiet dignity, moral earnestness and strong faith" as the proper methods of meeting anti-Semitism.

U. S. SHIPS URGED TO DOCK AT LIMERICK

Limerick, Ireland, Jan. 18—William Griffin, editor and publisher of the New York Enquirer, at a special meeting in Limerick City Hall, laid before Mayor Burke and other city officials a letter from Charles S. Hand of the United States Lines.

Hand, in the letter, requested Griffin to investigate the practicability of ships of that company navigating the Shannon from the sea to Limerick, a distance of 70 miles and landing passengers.

Griffin was assured by all those present, including technical experts, that the largest ocean liners can safely navigate the Shannon within a short distance of Limerick.

After the meeting Griffin said:

"I will send a favorable report to Mr. Hand, and I hope his company will act favorably on it, because nothing would give American tourists a greater thrill than concluding their voyage from New York by sailing up the historic Shannon river, the longest river in Great Britain and Ireland and one of the best known and loved in the world."

RADIO-ACTIVE ORE BLAMED FOR CRASHES

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (AP)—Vast deposits of radio-active ore on the airline route over Newhall Pass, a mining engineer suggested today, may have been responsible for two plane crashes and the loss of 16 lives within a month.

Wireless communication aboard both doomed transports possibly was affected by millions of tons of uranium, a radium-filled mineral lying just below the surface of the Newhall hills, said Charles Stanley.

A United Air Line transport crashed Dec. 27, killing 12 occupants. And a Western Air Express ship was wrecked last Tuesday, killing Martin Johnson, noted movie explorer, and three other men. Both planes crashed in the same mountain region as they neared the Burbank airport.

His theory recalled the recent report of the Copeland Senate subcommittee that the guiding radio beam of the Van Nuys station here is "generally unreliable."

In stormy weather, when electrical impulses are doubly conducive, attraction of the ore might even throw the federal radio beam out of focus.

Fourth Man Dies of Air Injuries

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (AP)—Earl E. Spencer of Chicago died today, the fourth fatality resulting from the forced landing of a Salt Lake-Los Angeles air transport near here last Tuesday.

The other victims were Martin Johnson, famed explorer; James A. Braden, Cleveland manufacturer, and A. L. Loomis, Omaha investment banker.

NOTABLES JOIN RUSTIC FROLIC IN NEW YORK

New York, Jan. 18 (US)—The garden variety of headaches sprouted in the upper crust of Manhattan society as a fitting aftermath of an all-night "barnyard party" given by Elsa Maxwell, society's irrepressible court jester.

From midnight until dawning, New York's leading socialites and a sprinkling of titled foreigners and domestic entertainers frolicked around the Jade Room of the Waldorf-Astoria in a motley assortment of barnyard costumes. It was proclaimed the New York social season's most unusual and successful party.

Gingham and overalls were the keynote—but the farm problem itself seemed nowhere in evidence despite the fact that chubby exhibitionist Miss Maxwell contrived to produce five pigs, five cows, a mule, a champion Ohio hog caller, and a genuine "turkey in the straw" orchestra as stage props for her party.

For, emblishing their 98-cent ginghams, the women displayed one of the greatest fortunes in sparkling jewels ever seen at one party in Manhattan.

At one of the gayest tables of celebrities sat Douglas Fairbanks in a red farm shirt and hay-infested trousers; Mrs. Fairbanks, former Lady Sylvia Ashley, with enough diamonds and rubies over her Tyrolean peasant costume to buy 1000 prize cows; Kay Francis, the screen star, dressed as a Russian farm peasant—red shawl and all; Clifton Webb, Broadway's social registerite actor, clad in blue overalls with big straw sombrero.

KILLIAN GETS PAROLE AID

The state parole board voted today not to demand the return of John J. Killian, formerly of Somerville, to state prison to finish a life sentence, despite his failure to report to the parole board as often as the law required.

Killian was sentenced to life in 1908 in connection with the death of a Somerville druggist who was beaten by him and several other men.

In 1918, his sentence was commuted to 15 years-to-life and he was paroled. He reported regularly until 1929. Because of his failure to report since that time, the parole was revoked and a warrant issued for his arrest. Killian walked into New York Police headquarters yesterday and surrendered, explaining he had just heard of the revocation.

According to Deputy Commissioner of Correction Edwin C. U. Bagley, the board decided that Killian's surrender showed he was keeping the peace and the members did not think his failure to report after having reported regularly for 11 years was sufficient cause to send him back to prison. New York police were asked to request him to report regularly hereafter.

Fire Chief Neary Dies in Natick

John H. Neary, chief of the Natick fire department and a World War hero, died at his home, 82 Walnut street, Natick, today.

Neary, serving in a machine gun battalion during the World War, was cited for bravery on the field, awarded the Order of the Purple Heart decoration and was promoted to lieutenant on the field.

He gained fame early in the century as a marathon runner and at one time was coach of the University of Maine basketball team. He had been fire chief for 16 years.

His widow, Josephine, and a brother, George, survive him.

Banquet Slaying Now Centers on 6 Suspects

ed the big gathering as they had been before the trouble started.

Then the questioning, the re-enactment of the scene, was carried out in the best tradition of stage and literary thrillers.

POLICE BAFFLED

Hour after hour, from 11:30 p. m. until just before dawn was breaking detectives questioned the guests, moved them around, then excused them, pair by pair, until a final dozen were held for more questioning.

But these, too, were released today, and police admitted they were baffled. Nowhere in their search did they find the knife that killed Cicero, who is head of the Garment Motor Transport Company here.

Their closest guess was that the fight started between two groups of diners in the northwest corner of the room when the party at Cicero's table, all enjoying the wines that went with the banquet, still talked in loud voices when time came for the speakers to be heard.

LABOR ROW HINTED

There was a second supposition that labor troubles might have been the motive of the killing.

As police reconstructed the scene, the large gathering, bathed in glaring light in the big ballroom, had finished dinner, had listened to dance music and entertainment, when Grover Whalen rapped for order at the speakers' table.

The gathering at Cicero's table still was loud and gay. Again and again the chairman rapped for attention. Suddenly, so the detectives pieced the scene together, several men rose from separate tables in that section of the hall, converged on Cicero's table, and the fight, short and vicious, was on.

When it was over Cicero was unconscious under the table. He was carried to the lobby. An ambulance surgeon pronounced him dead.

Two persons, known by police to have been at Cicero's table, were not located. They were sought today.

Tonight, Reinhardt's "Eternal Road" will be filling the house again.

MOOR INDICTED IN JOB FRAUD

Paul J. Moor, Jr., formerly of Boston and Malden, was indicted today by the U. S. grand jury for allegedly soliciting money from three men on the claim he could get them Federal jobs.

He is accused of taking $265 from Charles DeLanca for a job as interpreter at the immigration station, $600 from Charles H. Baker, for a job as engineer in the Department of Labor, and $150 from Richard O'Donnell for a job as storekeeper at the post office.

The grand jury returned four public indictments, four secret indictments and three no bills to Judge Hugh D. McLellan.

Among the other public indictments was one charging William Wesley Ward of Chelsea with assault on David A. Hercules of Winthrop on the 12th floor of the Federal Building, December 7.

Thomas J. Reynolds and Richard Kushner, both of Boston, were charged with defrauding the government of liquor fees by operating a rectifying plant on Commercial avenue, Cambridge, in 1934.

Francis Abramovitch of Boston was indicted for allegedly forging the signature of Mary A. Lebanon of Lincoln street, Charlestown, to a Civilian Conservation Corps check for $25.

BIRTHDAY BALL SALE AIDED BY SALLY RAND

This is stage and screen day at Newspaper Row headquarters for the sale of tickets to the Roosevelt birthday ball, with Sally Rand, of fan and bubble fame, among the entertainers scheduled to be on hand to greet prospective patrons of the big affair in Boston Garden, January 29.

Tomorrow, Fred Waring and the Lane sisters, Priscilla and Rosemary, with some of Fred's innovations, will take over ticket headquarters, 238 Washington street, at the noon hour.

Miss Rand said she was sorry she couldn't appear in—or more properly, out of—costume today, but she'd bring an extra nice smile for the customers, anyway.

Women leaders who have been working under direction of the general Birthday Ball committee met tonight at headquarters to appoint sub-committee chairmen, ushers and other ball officials.

Reports of ticket sales to date are highly favorable, it was announced today, with every indication that the sum raised for the benefit of infantile paralysis sufferers of New England and for a national battle against the dread disease will top all records of previous years.

The committee in charge again called public attention today to the fact that a large percentage of the ball proceeds goes to Greater Boston institutions.

"BREAK" NEAR IN KIDNAPING

the Department of Justice was made by Detective Captain James J. Kennedy of Lowell, police.

Hiding with the suspect, all the way from Florida to Texas, was a Lowell resident who went directly to Captain Kennedy with the information upon arriving at Lowell at 10:30 a. m.

The Lowell man said the passengers who researched the published descriptions of the kidnaper bandits a New York Central train at Pierre, Fla., and remarked that he had been riding in buses the above week.

He was described as 30 to 42 years old, five feet eight inches, 160 to 170 pounds, with a fair face, a two weeks' growth of whiskers and scratches on his face. He was very poorly dressed.

The two men changed lines together at New York and came on to Boston, where the suspect said he was going to Portland to visit relatives.

The Lowell man, a sportsman hunter, whose name the police withhold said he had read descriptions of the Hartson and Fisher brothers and considered he was close

Federal Sleuth Mum On Chief Nathan's Trip

Washington, Jan. 18 (INS)—The grim search for the kidnap-slayer of Toyosaburo Charles Mason continued today in southern California after G-men had sifted clue upon clue and arrived at the conclusion they finally have identified the fiend.

Harold Nathan, field general of the G-men and assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, chief G-man, suddenly left here during the week-end by plane for Los Angeles.

Two suspects were under arrest in southern California and in Culver City, another at Compton.

The G-men here would make no comment concerning Nathan's trip. They characteristically kept their lips tight.

Whether one of the suspects under arrest in Southern California actually is the black-bearded "Tim" who abducted the son of Dr. William W. Mattson and murdered him before the prominent physician could pay the $28,000 ransom, who as closely guarded as Nathan's mission.

ELIMINATE SUSPECTS

Meanwhile, the G-men here, aided by state police officers, had eliminated a number of suspects in the Pacific Northwest.

Reports that definite fingerprints on "Tim" are in possession of G-men gave additional weight to the belief the search has narrowed to one man.

Whether "Tim" was a disgruntled Works Progress Administration worker who disappeared a few days ago also was closely guarded by E. J. Connelly and other G-men in charge of the Tacoma end of the manhunt.

DISGRUNTLED WORKER

A foreman on a WPA job regarded the disgruntled worker remarked prior to the kidnaping:

"I'll never starve as long as there are rich men around here who have sons they love."

The foreman thought nothing of the remark at the time but following the kidnaping reported the incident.

The foreman said the worker was employed on a project near Everett at the time of his discharge about December 15.

charging $1500-a-year employes.

"However, I am too far away from the center of Massachusetts activities to discuss the situation as I otherwise would."

NOT INTERESTED

When the former Bay State executive was told of the filing of two bills by Representative Christian Herter, Republican floor leader in the House, intended to oust State Commissioner of Education Payson Smith and Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty, he smilingly replied:

"Let them do as they wish. I am on my honeymoon and politics don't interest me at the present."

Asked to reveal his travel plans the former governor said he would remain in Miami until Wednesday, then take a trip to Havana and later journey to New Orleans.

The former governor expressed regret that Attorney Joseph Scolponetti had been dropped from the state service.

"Attorney Scolponetti told me," said the former governor, "that if I appointed him to Professor Simpson's berth he was confident Governor Hurley would keep him in the position. He mentioned the fact he knew the governor when they both attended Boston College."

ATTENDS MASS

The former governor and Mrs. Curley, both dressed in tropical clothing, attended mass on Sunday at St. Patrick's church, Miami Beach.

Curley said an impromptu reception outside the church before and after the services.

"It looks as if you know a great many people who are anxious to greet your governor," said the Rev. Fr. Barry, pastor of the church.

Mrs. Curley told us the former governor and herself had made the trip from Nassau to Miami on the Yankee Clipper, one of the crack planes of the Pan-American line.

"It was the first time I ever was in a plane," said Mrs. Curley. "I admit I was a bit frightened before the trip started, but liked the trip very much. I am going to do more flying from now on.

"I am getting lonesome for my two boys. I usually talk with them each afternoon at 4:30. I am pleased they have been so well."

I asked Mrs. Curley if she intended to play any golf while in Miami.

BOTH TANNED

"You would joke me about my golf," she replied good naturedly. "I don't play golf. I merely play at it. My husband likes to play golf and, if he wishes, I shall accompany him."

The former governor and Mrs. Curley have both been tanned by the tropical sun, and appeared to be enjoying the best of health. The heavy lines which were noticeable on Curley's face during the recent campaign have disappeared.

The man is blessed with remarkable recuperative powers and looks physically fit.

At the Piedmont the former governor and his bride were greeted by Most Rev. James Joseph Mahoney, Commissioner of Education Gordon and Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty, he smilingly replied.

More Measles Than Pneumonia

Although Boston has an unusually large number of pneumonia cases, there are not as many cases of the illness in the State now as there were a year ago, Dr. Henry D. Chase, State commissioner of public health announced today.

Measles continued to increase in prevalence, topping the list of communicable diseases.

Britain Presses Japan's Naval Aim

Britain notified the United States Italy has agreed to the limitation.

Bridges Named To 5 Committees

Washington, Jan. 18 (AP)—Senator H. Styles Bridges, Republican, of New Hampshire, received today assignment to five subcommittees of the Senate appropriations committee.

The subcommittees are War Department, Treasury-Post Office, Legislative establishments and District of Columbia.

ROPE SNAPS, GAINS LIFE FOR SLAYER

Shanghai, Jan. 18 (AP) — The death sentence from which burly Atma Singh, Sikh member of the British police, escaped when a snapped rope saved him on the gallows, was commuted today to life imprisonment.

The British embassy announced the commutation. The officer, who was to have died for the hatchet slaying of a fellow policeman, will finish his days in a jail in his native India.

Officials said Atma Singh's neck was stretched two inches when he underwent the terrible test as the rope broke. It was said he was recovering from minor injuries and his neck was slowly contracting.

Atma Singh created a vexing problem for British authorities last Dec. 29 when the rope severed as he was to plunge through the trap.

While they investigated whether he were legally hanged, his wife and other devout British Indians attributed the escape to divine intervention and looked upon the convicted murderer as a minor deity.

JAIL FUGITIVES GET OFFER OF AMNESTY

Guelph, Ont., Jan. 18 (INS)—With 32 convicts still at large after the sensational riot and prison break at Guelph reformatory last night, Harry Nixon, acting premier of Ontario, today offered general amnesty to any of the fugitives who voluntarily give themselves up.

The offer was made at the height of the greatest manhunt in the history of this province. Ten of the 42 prisoners who fought their way to freedom from the flaming bedlam of the prison were captured during the morning.

Battling the revolt, 132 officers from four police forces finally succeeded in checking the raging tide of vandalism with tear bombs, fire hose and gas from fire extinguishers. Two reformatory guards and ten prisoners were injured in the long series of clashes.

$50,000 DAMAGE

Damage to the prison block was estimated at more than $50,000.

Sergeant A. G. McGuire of the reformatory was struck on the head by a heavy piece of iron thrown by one of the prisoners. He stayed at his post until the uprising was quelled.

None of the prisoners was seriously hurt. An iron door battered from its hinges by the mob fell on the head of one inmate, crushing the arch. This was the most serious casualty among the prisoners.

When the outburst had been finally put down five hundred prisoners were jammed into one hundred cells and two hundred others who were regarded as having taken no part in the insurrection were put to work at clearing away the worst of the wreckage.

RIOTERS SET FIRES

Ranging the custodial buildings, out of all control, the rioters set fire to everything that would burn and cracked up everything that could be broken. Only the industrial buildings escaped untouched.

Warden Orr's office of receiving parcels was given by the inmates as the reason for their uprising. The new restriction, Dr. J. D. Heaslip, superintendent, said, was put into force because receipt of money by the prisoners was giving rise to inequalities and disturbances.

ROXBURY WARD MUST VOTE

A special election must be held in Ward 9, Roxbury, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of City Councilor Richard D. Gleason, Corporation Counsel John I. Fitzgerald was informed today by the municipal law department.

The city charter provides that on death or resignation of a councilor within 18 months of his election, a special election must be held.

The date will not be set until Mayor Mansfield's return from Washington, where he will be a guest at the President's inaugural Wednesday.

In respect to the late councilor the city council meeting today was cut short and the flag on City Hall was at half-staff. The Hall will be closed Wednesday morning during the funeral hours.

Councilor Gleason died of pneumonia yesterday morning at his home in Ruggles street, Roxbury. He will be buried from St. Francis de Sales Church, Roxbury.

2,187,944 Now on WPA Rolls

Washington, Jan. 18 (AP) — The Works Progress Administration disclosed today it was continuing to pare relief jobs—despite the appearance of a new congressional blue seeking expansion of the WPA program.

Administrator Harry L. Hopkins said the number of WPA cases had been reduced by 96,000 to 2,187,944 in the two weeks ended December 26.

Washington, Jan. 18 (AP)—Attorney General Paul A. Dever of Massachusetts asked the Supreme Court today not to rule on the constitutionality of benefits conferred under constitutionality of the Federal Social Security Act.

Dever said no federal issue was involved in the state action.

Nurses to Go to South Africa

Here's one of the last babies at New England Sanitarium and Hospital in Stoneham to get the expert attention of these two nurses who are leaving this week to take new positions in their "home town"—Capetown, South Africa. After working side by side for three years as nurses at New England Sanitarium and Hospital in Stoneham, two young women are separating this week, but only to meet again in Capetown, South Africa.

They are Miss Joyce I. Van der Pool, 23, and Miss Lulu M. Hattingh, 28, both of whom graduated as nurses in the class of 1936.

Why are they meeting in Capetown?

"We both come from there," they smiled today, in reply.

Miss Van der Pool leaves New York tomorrow on the S. S. Stella Polaris as a private nurse for a former patient at the hospital.

After visiting Havana, Panama and a score of South Sea Islands, she expects to land in Capetown on April 16.

Waiting to meet her will be Miss Hattingh, who will have been there since February 22. She leaves New York Friday on the S. S. Europa for London and then sails for Capetown. She will stay in London a week, touring the city.

She has accepted a call from the Seventh-day Adventist denomination to act as school nurse and dean of women of Helderberg College at Somerset West, Capetown.

Miss Van der Pool plans to work in an English Government Hospital after visiting her folks in Capetown.

Pickwick Tragedy Survivor Found Dead in Mud

Face downward in the mud, the body of Harris A. Hirshberg, 49, of Monmouth street, East Boston, former waiter in the ill-fated Pickwick Club, was found dead today at the foot of Moore street, East Boston.

Mystery surrounded the death of Hirshberg, who was one of the fortunate 150 persons to make their way to safety when the night club in Beach street slid into an adjoining excavation on the morning of July 4, 1925. Not so fortunate, 43 men and women died.

Discovery of the body was made shortly after a daylight by a Narrow Gauge motorman, who notified police.

Captain William Donovan, of East Boston police station, who went personally to the mud flats near Wood Island Park, to investigate, called Dr. Charles Meloni of Bayswater street, East Boston.

The physician, following a preliminary examination of the body, said the man had been dead little more than an hour.

An autopsy would have to be performed, however, to determine exact cause of death, Dr. Meloni declared. Identification of the body was made by a brother, Henry Hirshberg of Winchester.

The Morning After Taking Carter's Little Liver Pills

HURLEY NAMES MILK CONTROL BOARD OF 8

Governor Charles F. Hurley today appointed a committee of eight, including three farmers, to advise and assist him in solving problems of milk control.

The committee will be headed by William Casey, a farmer and former member of the legislature, living in Spencer.

35 EMPLOYES

Other members are:

Elmer W. Fisk, farmer, Lunenburg; John M. Whitey of Cambridge, past president of the Massachusetts Restaurant Owners' Association and one of the governor's civilian aides; Anthony Y. Koziowsky, newly appointed chief inspector for the milk control board; Charles E. Sheppard, farmer, of Warren; A. Glenn Simm of Belmont, a milk dealer; Herman M. Bates, office manager for the milk board, and Joseph C. Cort, milk administrator.

The governor stated that a survey of the milk board by Koziowsky Bates and Cort showed 35 employes were needed — 12 auditors, 12 clerks and 11 inspectors. That number will be appointed, he said, from among the 52 whose three months' terms expired Saturday.

Governor Hurley said his appointment of an advisory committee was in line with his campaign promise to ask the advise of a committee of citizens on problems with which he had little or no familiarity.

CAHILL OUT

On recommendation of Adjutant General Charles H. Cole, he will place members of the Board of Armory Commissioners on a per diem basis, at $15 a day, when they work.

This strips John F. Cahill of Everett, whom ex-Governor Curley appointed to the board on February 20, 1935, of his salary of $2500 a year.

Besides Cahill the board consists of General Cole and a national guard quartermaster who has been drawing $500 for his service. There is nothing for the board to do until a new armory is built, the Governor explained.

STRIKE PARLEY FAILS, MOTORS CHIEFS QUIT

had been laid off as a result of strikes and shutdowns in General Motors plants.

The immediate role to be assumed by Governor Murphy remained in doubt this afternoon. Reporters sought him as soon as the collapse of the conference became known, but he was not to be found. It was not known immediately whether he would carry out his earlier intention of flying to Washington this afternoon for the inauguration ceremonies.

The negotiations today were agreed upon by union and company officials at a 15-hour conference in Lansing last Thursday and Friday, called by Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan on the heels of the Flint riots and bloodshed.

Conditions for the negotiations included, among other clauses, evacuation of the plants held by all sown strikers, on the part of the union, and a promise by the company that it would not try to resume work in strike-bound plants until February 1.

CHARGES BAD FAITH

Although President Martin yesterday charged that General Motors officials had shown bad faith on two counts, he asserted they were offering workers hope today, the Cadillac plants in Detroit, contrary to the union's terms, and took further offense at the action of the Flint Alliance, recently formed anti-strike, anti-union organization, which unionists charge is subsidized by General Motors.

As a result, Martin ordered the sit-down strikers still occupying the Fisher Body plants in Flint and the Chevrolet plant in Toledo to stick to their posts. They were to have been taken out of the factories yesterday.

Knudsen had telegraphed George S. Boyer, president of the Flint Alliance, in reply to a query, that General Motors would deal with non-UAW workers in a separate conference on Tuesday. UAW officials were infuriated by this, as they hold that recognition of their union as the sole collective bargaining agency between workers and company is their most important demand.

FEET IN TENSE SITUATION

Martin also told newspapermen when he left the conference that the union would present a formal statement of its position later.

There was noticeable confusion in the strike situation through the morning. It was acceptable until the last minute whether the representatives of both sides would even meet. General Motors officials have declared from the start they would not negotiate while any of their plants were occupied by sit-downers.

Union leaders declared they had been "double-crossed" into evacuating the Cadillac and Fleetwood plants in Detroit and didn't propose to lose any further strongholds until convinced that the company was acting in good faith with them.

The deadlock seemed complete, but at 11 o'clock this morning Martin from union headquarters in the Hoffman building held a telephone conversation with Knudsen, the result of which he refused to divulge shortly afterwards. Martin accompanied by aides, started for the General Motors building.

TERSE ANNOUNCEMENT

The union men arrived at the conference room at about 11:30 and were greeted by the only two General Motors officials then present, Wilson and Anderson. Knudsen, Brown and Smith arrived at noon.

"All negotiations are off."

It is expected that the General Motors statement would reiterate the company's stand that it would not negotiate until the sit-down strikers had left the plants. The union probably will intensify its strike efforts and retain control of the Flint and Toledo plants.

General Motors had not indicated early this afternoon whether any serious effort to resume work in the Detroit, Cadillac and Fleetwood plants would be attempted.

TROOPS STILL THERE

Apparently union leaders feared such an effort might be made for they sent 150 men to the picket line at the Cadillac plant.

The pickets found the engineering plant in the plant and when Frank Wilber, a foreman, attempted to enter, he was caught by five pickets and thrown into the street. Fourteen patrolmen saw the incident but took no action.

Ford Men Organized "But May Not Strike"

Detroit, Jan. 18 (AP)—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, said today "we are organizing employes of the Ford Motor Company, but that does not mean Ford is next."

He was commenting on a banner carried in a U. A. W. A. parade Saturday which said "G M now—Ford next."

Martin said: "We hope it will not be necessary to call strikes in any other automobile plants."

Strikers Hang Motors' Chief in Effigy

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Sound photo shows how strikers in the Flint, Mich., plants of General Motors and Fisher Body hanged a General Motors official in effigy on the roof of one of the plants. They refused yesterday to evacuate despite a previous agreement. Today peace negotiations failed and, the companies and their employes are at it again, hammer and tongs.

REVEAL HUSHED UP BROOKLINE VICE REPORT

Failure of Brookline officials to take any action on the report in 1933 by the Massachusetts Crime Commission of widespread vice in that town may result in the ouster of one Brookline official and a probable move for indictment of three others, the Boston Evening American learned today.

Wide-open operation of houses of ill repute, gaming rooms and number pool writing, which were first brought to light by Department of Justice operatives and since bared by investigators under District Attorney Edmund L. Dewing, were revealed in the Crime Commission report.

This report, investigators stated today, was turned over to Chief of Police Allen Rutherford.

An investigator from Dewing's office stated today:

"It would have been a simple matter for the Brookline police to have rid the town of vice and corruption at that time, if they had wanted to. The report by the Crime Commission supplied minute information as to names and addresses. The fact that the report was ignored speaks for itself."

It is understood that District Attorney Dewing will use the Crime Commission report as a basis of his move for indictments and ouster, when he appears before the Norfolk county grand jury on January 27.

Meanwhile state detectives continued on the shooting affray of men who attacked a janitor and a woman key-witness in the vice probe and scoured the underworld in an effort to find the woman owner of a house who vanished 12 days ago.

This woman, whom investigators believe may have been kidnaped or may have fled death threats, is reported to have supplied Dewing with important information regarding payment of "protection money" to Brookline police officers.

Drastic action is expected to be taken tomorrow following a week-end investigation into the failure of Brookline town officials to report to Dewing's investigators the lewd assault by two men on Hildreth S. Dudley, 32, janitor of an Ivy street apartment.

Investigators revealed today that Chief Rutherford had given no "plausible excuse" for not having reported the attack.

Son Ill, Dad Rings Fire Alarm for Aid

Believing his 11-months-old son to be dying of a whooping-cough paroxysm, a frantic South End father rang in a fire alarm to bring help to his home today.

The sick child, little George Condell of East Brookline street, South End, was rushed to City Hospital in the Warren avenue police station's ambulance, which had been sent to the scene of the supposed blaze.

Dr. Louis Reese, night superintendent at the hospital, relieved the ailing boy's condition, enabling him to breathe more freely.

After they had been supplied with medicine and had been told what to do in another such emergency, the child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Condell, were allowed to take little George home with them again.

Fitzgerald Speech On Franklin Balked

Acting Mayor John I. Fitzgerald today found his study of the life of Benjamin Franklin all in vain. The acting mayor had carefully prepared a speech on the 231st anniversary of the birth of Franklin, traditionally delivered before Boston schoolchildren at the Franklin statue in front of City Hall.

The rain, however, kept everybody away and the acting mayor was as silent as Franklin's statue.

TO ILLUSTRATE SALES TALKS

In charge will be Miss Margaret George, former director of allied art and industry at the Albright Art Gallery, Buffalo, N. Y.

One course of eight lectures will be on the subject, "Basic Art Principles Applied to Home Furnishings." The other will be on "Basic Art Principles Applied to Apparel."

Cox-Schermerhorn Ceremony Fashionable Event

By BETTY ALDEN

NO SAILING of a cruise to the Southern Seas would be complete without the arrival of a bride and groom . . . and the inevitable shower of rice and confetti . . . Georgia Schermerhorn and Butler Cox furnished this dramatic touch before the Britannic sailed from the Cunard dock in New York Saturday evening . . . for a cruise to Nassau . . .

(Bachrach Photo)
FRANCES SEAVER

Most newlyweds take every possible precaution to try to make their fellow passengers think that they have been Mr. and Mrs. for a long time . . . and keep them from guessing they are on a honeymoon . . .

All such plans were useless for the Coxes, however . . . for there were not only the usual rice and confetti, and flashes of news cameras, as the couple went up the gangplank, but the bridal bouquet was present as a dead give-away to even the least observant . . .

Evidently the lucky bridesmaid who caught Georgia's bouquet considered it such a good omen that she took it along when she went down to the dock to drink a bon voyage toast . . .

Most all of the Bancrofts and Coxes of Boston were on hand for the wedding . . . which took place in Locust Valley, L. I., Saturday afternoon . . .

The bridegroom, Butler Cox, is a brother of William C. Cox, whose wife is the former Jessie Bancroft . . . Bill was an usher, while another brother, Thomas Cox of Boston, was best man . . .

Mrs. Cox and her sister, Jane Bancroft, were among the large procession of attendants who walked up the aisle before the bride . . . they all wore picturesque frocks of aquamarine taffeta with underskirts of pleated raspberry chiffon, raspberry slippers, and twists of the two colors in their hair . . . Huge arm bouquets of mimosa, blue cornflowers and variicolored snapdragons added even more color and gaiety to their outfits . . . Most of the other attendants were New York girls . . . Mrs. A. Coster Schermerhorn, wife of the bride's cousin, at whose home the reception was held, and Elizabeth Duval were the honor attendants . . . their outfits were completely raspberry color . . .

Ceremony Performed Amid Picturesque Scene

THE BRIDE WAS a lovely and aristocratic picture as she stood beside her bridegroom in the beautiful chancel . . . before an altar of carved woods from Scotland, illuminated by the flickering candles and soft multi-colored light which filtered through the stain glass windows above their heads . . . The large assemblage of guests who filled the church consisted of relatives and intimate friends . . . and still other friends were invited to the reception . . .

The chancel was banked with blossoming orange trees and feathery ferns, and the pews were marked with clusters of white snapdragon and lilies . . . The bride, a member of the same Schermerhorn family as New York's famous social dictator, the late Mrs. William K. Astor, is the daughter of the late Amos Schermerhorn and the late Mrs. Frank N. Miller . . . She attended fashionable schools in New York and South Carolina and is a member of the Junior League and the Orange County Hunt Club of Virginia . . .

Mr. Cox prepared for college at Milton Academy and graduated from Harvard in 1927 . . . His clubs include the Owl and Phoenix S. K. . . . He is in the publishing business in New York where he and his bride will reside at 120 East Seventy-Fifth street . . .

Fellow passengers of the Coxes are Frannie Seaver and Mrs. Charles Jenney of Brookline who are taking the trip together . . . the first person Frannie recognized as she leaned over the rail watching the other passengers board the ship, were Sammy Eisen, conductor of Ruby Newman's boys, and his wife, who are combining business with pleasure and scouting around Havana for rhumba themes, native music and ideas in general for a Spanish motif coming out party, to be given in Boston next autumn . . .

Frannie's eyes sparkled with excitement as she contemplated the fun ahead on the cruise . . . and she made a very natty little figure leaning against the rail in a light blue tweed suit topped by a brown cape coat and hat, and a string of gardenias on one shoulder . . . Mrs. Jenney wore a modish black street outfit . . .

Louise Batchelder to Wed Navy Officer

NOT ONLY WOULD it take them a long time to reach here, but also a quantity of postage stamps, if Louise Batchelder should write notes to all her friends telling of her engagement to a young Surgeon-Lieutenant in the Royal Navy, who is stationed in China where she is visiting at present . . . so her friends are learning of the news in the formal announcement being made by Louise's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Batchelder, Jr., of Beverly . . .

The bride-to-be, daughter of George Batchelder of Beverly Farms, who is also traveling abroad at present, is to wed William Astle Ryan, R. N., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William A. Ryan of Dublin, Ireland . . . She attended the Winsor School and is a member of the Junior League . . .

Her future husband is connected with H. M. S. Ladybird at Nanking . . . and the wedding is tentatively planned to take place in Beverly in the autumn . . . Miss Batchelder is expected to return in the spring . . . She is a sister of Mrs. Uriel Haskell Crocker of Milton and of Samuel Batchelder of Beverly, who married Peggy Read . . .

Boston College Senior Class Feted at Supper Dance

A trumpet blared a warning note . . . Boston College seniors scurried to take their place in the line of march . . . and the promenade was on.

'Twas the thirty-first annual Cotillonthian reception and supper dance in honor of the Boston College class of 1937 on the Omphaly Picnic Friday evening.

Climax to the evening came at the conclusion of the grand march when Alice Quaste of Newton, president of the Emmanuel College seniors, presented Mrs. Daniel Holland of Jamaica Plain with a bouquet of roses. Alice, a striking brunette, was escorted by the president of the Boston College senior class, Richard Kelly. Mrs. Holland was lovely in a gown of ivory brocade and a corsage of orchids.

Rose Crepe

Escorted by Stanley Driscoll, senior chairman of the dance, was Margaret Witham, whose old rose crepe was set off by a cluster of orchids and John F. Donelan, grand marshal of the promenade, chose Anne Egan as his partner. Anne wore a gown of heavy white ciepe and Virginia Burke, who was escorted by John McCurdy, was stunning in an intricately cut gown of black crepe.

Mrs. Paul Curley wore the evening's smartest gown . . . a suavely cut affair of green blister satin . . .

In the party were Mrs. Stanton White . . . the former Sally Curley . . . who wore red accessories with her lame gown and Mrs. Charles Murphy was equally smart in white crepe and orchids.

Members of the senior group had a big evening . . . sitting about at their ringside table watching the young couples trip. Around the table were Josephine Carrigan, who wore a spring frock gaily printed with flowers . . . Mrs. Stanton White . . . the former Sally Curley . . . who wore red accessories with her lame gown and Mrs. Charles Murphy was equally smart in white crepe and orchids.

Other club members on hand to greet the Boston College seniors were Mrs. John Murray, who rustled about in Kleanor blue taffeta and Mrs. John H. O'Neil, who chose a stunning sweater of black crepe bordered in white.

Ostrich Tips

Jean Donohue, escorted by Kevin Sullivan, had a tiny cluster of ostrich tips in her well-coiffured bob . . . the same shade of blue predominating in her printed frock and Helen Kelly's blonde coloring was set off by an effective costume of black and white.

Unusual accessories provided the sartorial keynote of the evening. Dorothy Mulhern wore a gay little bolero of scarlet taffeta with her basic net and mistening flowers in her hair and Norma Noonan tied her locks with tiny bows of black taffeta.

Glimpsed Mary Vaas of Newton dancing gaily with Dan Holland. Margaret Rooney came to the party in orchid and pearl satin escorted by Alexander Rae Forbes of Huntington Park, Cal.

Mrs. Richard Solon of Jamaica Plain wore bronze satin and mink and Mrs. John Brandis, always to the fore in club activities, in black sheer velvet in ecru lace.

Another group of young people making merry at the affair were the Hollands, Mary and Ann, who chatted with all during the dance. Mary was attractive in sea blue satin and Ann chose a full skirted frock of black taffeta and a cluster of green orchids. Ann was escorted by George Curley and Frank Fung, dance attendance on Mary Holland. Eleanor O'Neil, in royal blue taffeta and gardenias, danced about with John Gately and Eleanor Howard, whose black taffeta was studded with rhinestones, was escorted by F. Gerard Sullivan.

Also glimpsed Mrs. Therera Colfer, Mrs. William C. Mahoney, Mrs. Emile Coulon and many more who had come to spend the night dining and dancing and extend a welcoming hand to the B. C. senior class . . .

Paramount to Feature Hungarian Actress

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (US)—No mere Hungarian cutie is Franciska Gaal, brought here by Paramount. She is a renowned European actress equally famous on the stage and screen and, according to Ernst Lubitsch, one of the most promising foreign players ere to set foot in Hollywood.

Miss Gaal, who hails from Budapest, has been in Hollywood for two months preparing for her P a r a m o u n t debut, and Adolph Zukor, take it from me, will launch her in the right style.

Before she makes "Hotel Imperial," she will be seen in "Then Came Spring," starring Bing Crosby to be cast with Edward Everett Horton in a featured role. Louella O. Parsons

This is an original story by Angela Sherwood with music by Friml and it's supposed to be just what the doctor ordered for the glamorous Franciska.

Prepare to hibernate if you are one of the few who don't like "kiddies" on the screen, for it begins to look like a big year for youngsters in the movies. Wonder if its true that we grownups keep the kid pictures going while Young America goes for Gable, Garbo and Taylor?

Anyway, we're set for an avalanche of juvenile entertainment beginning with Warner Brothers' announcement that "Penrod and Sam" with Billy Lee and Tommy Kelly, both Tarkington's stories of boyhood, will become a definite fixture in their lineup, to be produced in a series of one or two a year. This follows the flattering reception of "Penrod and Sam" at a sneak preview. The Mauch twins were in the original "Penrod and Sam" and they will be starred in the series to follow.

One of our super sleuths reports a deal now being discussed that offers interchanging of two important stars. Paramount would very much like to borrow George Brent from Warner Brothers for Claudette Colbert's picture, "She Met Him in Paris."

In exchange, George Raft would go to Warners for one of their forthcoming dramas which should be very good for George Raft since Warners are particularly successful in he-man dramas. The only fly in the ointment is that George Brent has been promised a holiday and he may have to take it now because of Warner's plans for him.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: The long and ardent love story of Merle Oberon and David Niven must really be over at last. Merle is in London to remain away for eight months, but the tipoff is in the attention David is showering on Virginia Bruce these days and evenings. I hear tell he lunches with her at Universal every day and calls for her when she's finished working and they're seen everywhere together. This is one romance that got off to a flying start without Hollywood even stupefying.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Reports that NORMA SHEARER is seriously ill again with pneumonia entirely unfounded. She telephoned the WILLIAM THALBERGS from the hospital to say she had stood the trip very well and was feeling fine; CHARLIE MacARTHUR, in town to talk "Gunga Din" story with RKO, says that HELEN HAYES will live at the hospital until she is entirely well. She reopened in her show, however, after closing for the first time in her career.

ETHEL SYKES very sick with measles and the boy friend reported growing cold. Tsk-tsk—and he used to be sane attentive; according to MIKE ROMANOFF, LILLA LORAN, Boston songstress, is his chief heart interest, the first MRS. ROMANOFF adopting a baby boy whom she is calling BRIAN JEANNE MARGEN and JERRY WALD the latest Hollywood romantic team; the GEORGE BRENT-ANITA LOUISE reunion flourishing with Anita receiving gardenias from him today.

CLARK GABLE for the past few weeks has been missing things out of his dressing room and if it happens again he's going to get himself a Hawkshaw cap and glasses and turn detective; RAY FRANCIS, everyone will be glad to hear, will be home this week after cutting her European vacation short; MARGARET LINDSAY building a cottage in Hawaii near JANET GAYNOR'S home; GEORGE O'BRIEN flying East to be present at the opening of his wife's (MARGERITE CHURCHILL) play she opens in Boston with PHILIP MERIVALE in "Ann Now (goodbye) the ANNE SHIRLEY-OWEN DAVIS, JR., battle is over and wounds if both of them can be happy as they look; JUDY GARLAND'S impromptu singing at the opening of a new night spot is appalling; ALICE FAYE and TONY MARTIN, the FRANCHOT TONE-JEROME COWAN, CHARLES ROGERS and scores of others there to help christen the new garden room.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

MONDAY MORNING MUSINGS: When a minor columnist like yours truly sees his October prediction about a January Red Sox trade involving Joe Vosmik dissolved in the current headlines into a trade between Trader Hornsby and the Cleveland man with the strange name, it is a blow . . . But like Marshal Foch, in the 1916 crisis, your correspondent rises to exclaim "My right is shattered, my left is in retreat, I am attacking with my center" . . . Consequently: Joe Vosmik will yet come to the Red Sox . . . So will Oral Hildebrand, who figured in the even-Stephen swap between Cleveland and St. Louis . . . Rick Ferrell, the Red Sox catcher, who figured in the "deal" pronounced here three months ago, will figure in the trade, and the possibility is that young Fabian Gaffke, the Sox recruit, will figure also . . . A Red Sox pitcher will go to St. Louis, and so will another bundle of Red Sox cash . . . In summing up, the deal may not prove so different from the one predicted here in October . . . Except that Eddie Collins may continue to save Lefty Grove's position with the Red Sox, and Pytlak, the diminutive Cleveland catcher, can't figure in the deal at all, because he is ailing and counting on retiring from the national pastime . . . Anyway, Vosmik is coming to the Red Sox . . .

GEORGE HOLLAND

It would strike this column square on its touchy funny bone if innumerable Republicans finally found spots in the state employ under the current Democratic administration . . . Moreover, in its mental meanderings, this space sees a return of the honeymooning Curleys long before the expected expiration of their bridal tour, and certainly before so distant a place as Honolulu, T. H., can be encountered the round-trip way . . .

Oh, yes! . . . (This January weather makes one think of April) . . . Knickerbocker may wear a Red Sox uniform, too.

New Lead:

Although he will not take a side when the question of extending the Boston closing hour for bars and cabarets comes to bat in the legislature, Police Commissioner Timilty gave this corner authority last night to quote him as saying that a later curfew on the sale of drinks will not jab him the wrong way . . .

Once Over Lightly:

Commissioner Timilty and Eddie Gallagher attended the annual dinner of the Theater Treasurers' Club of Boston at the Westminster . . . Charlie Lane was toastmaster . . . Fire Chief Frank Orvitt, former treasurer of the Tremont Theater, danced so nimbly that his former mates of the box-office wickets won't worry if he enters a blazing building . . . Chief Orvitt is employed by Rockland . . . He could do a time-step over the hottest spots of a burning tin roof . . . Selma La Rochelle, the girl with a true and beautiful voice, was the treasurers' star-singer again . . . If she is ready to work in Boston, the booking-agents should get her phone number from Tommy Roche at the Colonial or Arthur Manley at the Colonial . . . She would be a welcome relief from the battalion of hot-cha gals now employed . . .

Hugo Lindgren, formerly of the Plymouth, was elected president of the Treasurers' Club again . . . Among those he greeted were James A. O'Brien, popular business-agent of the stage-hands' local (No. 11), and Charles H. Fazer, business-agent of Local 17, the Theatrical Billposters' Boston branch . . . Henry Taylor, manager of the Met, was present . . . Fred Waring, he says, has broken his own attendance records at the Met . . . Belle Baker plays there February 4 . . . Belle is at the Hollywood in New York, and in rarest form . . . Pete Davis, the theatrical jack-of-all trades who is actor, stage director, and company manager, was a guest of the box-office men . . . He is managing Tallulah Bankhead in "Reflected Glory" . . . President Roosevelt made one of his occasional acceptances of a first-night bid for Tallulah's opening in Washington three weeks hence . . . Tallulah's dad, Speaker Bankhead, will be present also . . . And Miss Bankhead is agitated about that eventuality . . . Her father has yet to see her on the stage . . .

News that should break sometime today will tell about Billy Nixon, former treasurer of the Plymouth, being appointed to the post of supervisor of bookings for the Federal Theater in Massachusetts . . . That will make him owner of the second most important WPA theatrical post in the state . . . Joe Cook, one of the most popular theatrical managers Boston boosted, former boss of the razed Hollis Street Theater, was cheered when he entered . . . Eddie Spellman, Carol Sullivan, Sam Osgood, Stern, John Besty, Al Copland, Bill Landrigan, Eddie Ryan, Eddie Rosenbaum, Ed Anderson, Tommy Waters, Saul Kaplan, Freddie Bond and a dozen others who know that it isn't lack of esteem that causes their names to slip those keys at the moment . . . were invited to make last night's dinner the best in years.

'Green Light'

By Lloyd C. Douglas

A GREAT AUTHOR'S STORY OF LOVE VS. DUTY

(A Cosmopolitan Picture to Be Released Soon by Warner Brothers)

SYNOPSIS

Dean Harcourt of Trinity Cathedral is the confidant of all kinds and classes of people who are in distress.

Among his visitors is a harassed college professor. He later meets under Dean Harcourt's roof Joana Duquesne. Sonia helps him to find new confidence in himself.

Meanwhile, the destinies of Dr. Newell Paige and Phyllis Dexter, who cannot foresee his "tragic blundering" at Parkway Hospital, are, it is certain, soon to be closely related.

CHAPTER 11

They left shortly before 10, for Celeste must be put to bed. Sonia, attractively attired for the street, brought the child down, and asked Mrs. Crandall if she might telephone for a taxi.

"Can't we take Sonia home, Daddy?" entreated Celeste Sonia mildly protested, but consented when Norwood's invitation was pressed.

After the hall door had been closed on them, Mrs. Crandall returned to the living room—where the Dean sat, alone, lost in a reverie.

"Odd little elf, that Celeste," remarked Mrs. Crandall.

"Yes, isn't she?" smiled the Dean absently.

"And you're an old matchmaker."

"Not this time."

"He was very much charmed."

"It takes two. And Sonia wasn't intended for the faculty of a university. Perhaps Celeste will attend to it, but I doubt it. However—Norwood needs something new to worry about. A good cure for trouble is a little more. It's on the principle of a serum."

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Crandall. "And it's your bedtime."

A week had passed—with surprising swiftness, too, for an idle man who had been long accustomed to a crowded program of exciting duties.

Leeds accepted him for what he termed to be—a quiet, genteel, young man of leisure.

Sylvia, forever at his heels, disarmed whatever suspicion might have disturbed the mind of the dog-loving public in respect to the stranger.

He had written "Nathan Parker" on a blank page at the Mansion with an unhesitating hand, for it was not the first time he had registered in that way.

The name had been adopted a month ago without much premeditation beyond a feeling that it would be convenient if the initials of his alias agreed with the monogram on a silver cigarette-case, which was about all he had left now, besides Sylvia, to remind him of the life he had abandoned.

Sometimes he had been amazed at the ease and rapidity of his self-adjustment to his new identity, responding automatically when addressed as "Mr. Parker." He wondered whether it would come as a shock if someone ever ventured to call him "Nathan," but that was unlikely. Pains would be taken to see that nobody entered quite that fully into his confidence.

Mrs. Brock, supervising the whole establishment, was by instinct clearly a lady; by background, too, no doubt, for her father, the venerable Dr. Graham, who lived three blocks from the ugly street was, according to Mr. Trumbull, one of the most important men in the community.

Man and Dog

Willing to talk—for she had begun to manifest something like solicitude for the lonesome fellow who strolled all day with his dog and retired early to bed—Dean Brock had spoken of her father and of Elise, his granddaughter, who lived with him. It was apparent that she took much pride in the girl.

"Elise has a voice," she confided one evening, as they sat on the veranda. "I don't mean that she just sings a little better than the other girls in the church choir. She has a great voice, and it's a pity she can't do anything about it. Father went her to Louisville for three winters, but times are going to be too bad this season. And father isn't so strong any more. Seventy-three. He'll have to stop some day soon.

"We all think it is a shame that he has to make those long trips; all kinds of weather and terrible roads off the main highways in the winter. But I reckon you understand how it is, when a man's been doctoring in one place for years, it's impossible for anybody either to come into the world or go out of it unless father's present.

"So—he's breaking, and mustn't try to do any more for Elise. It's hard on poor Clay, too, for grandpa had hoped he would be able to help him when the time came."

Parker murmured his polite regret that the young lady was unable to finish her vocal training.

"The trouble is, Elisa hasn't anyone to give her an introduction to the sort of people she ought to know if she's ever to make anything out of her music. It takes money to put on a recital in such a way that she could get a little attention . . . Of course—I reckon it's natural for a mother—I'm even more worried about Clay. How that poor child has suffered, these past four years, putting himself through the State University—"

"Is that true?" Parker queried with surprise. "I had no idea he was a university graduate; seems so young for that," he added quickly.

"Oh, I know he doesn't look much like it, around here, helping in the kitchen and doing all manner of odd jobs, but he just wanted to follow in his grandpa's footsteps. I'm sure I don't know what we're ever going to do with him. It's just breaking his spirit. I can see it—a little more every day."

The next afternoon Elsie had come to see her Aunt Clara. Parker had been out for a ramble that had taken him through the town, past the little huddle of shops.

Mrs. Brock and Elsie were talking earnestly in the hallway when he entered the hotel. Elsie's Aunt Clara could easily have presented him, but she had merely acknowledged his presence with a polite smile. He interpreted it to mean that Clara Brock, while cheerfully willing as his hostess to extend the amenities due a guest in her house—even to the point of impulsively discussing her own anxieties—felt under no compulsion to back him up socially. This thought Parker allowed her good breeding and common sense.

Terribly Alone

Nevertheless the little episode was disquieting. He was forced to admit to himself that his equivocal position in this house would presently demand clarification. He must either be on his way or give a satisfactory reason for remaining. A depressing sensation of loneliness swept him as he ascended to his room.

In the one brief glance at close range, he had noted that Elise was a comely brunette, a little better dressed than most of the young women he had seen on the street; had observed also that her impersonal survey of him, without the slightest trace of surprise, hinted a wider social experience than Leeds would be likely to afford. He wondered how much she fretted here, imagining he had read discontent in the moody brown eyes.

Next day Elise again had some occasion to visit her Aunt Clara. Parker had passed her on the front steps as she was arriving. Their eyes admitted, this time, the existence of each other, at least; but she did not speak, nor, of course, did he.

Next morning, as he sat on the sunny veranda with a Sunday paper strewn about him, Parker looked up to see Clara Brock standing before him, gravely arrayed in an outmoded black silk.

"Church?" he ventured, noting her hesitation to say whatever it was she had on her mind.

"I reckon you wouldn't care to go," she said, rather wistfully.

Somewhat to his own surprise, he promptly consented, warning her playfully that he was but little short of being a pagan and would have to be coached when to sit, kneel and stand.

"Oh—we don't have much of that," assured Mrs. Brock. "We stand up for the hymns, and sit through all the rest of it. You'll hear Elise. She's singing a solo. It will be good, too! I want you to listen, whether you're musical or not. Maybe you are."

"I used to fiddle a little," confessed Parker, as they strolled down the quiet street. "Not very good at it."

"Well," Mrs. Brock observed, philosophically, "when strangers say things like that about themselves you never can tell just what they mean, can you? . . . There's our Elise—going in now."

The little church was ugly without and dingy within, smelling of varnish, though there was no evidence that any had been applied recently.

Presently the principals came in, by doors leading to the choir and the pulpit; a dozen young women and four men edging deferentially into the pews facing the little cabinet organ, and the minister, a youngish man, of sober mien, taking his seat in a tall chair.

The organ, at the behest of a plump lady with a large hat, embarked uncertainly on a prelude which at least one member of the audience recalled—not without a pang of nostalgia—as an exercise he had been required to learn when he had been seven. The piece was entitled "Evening."

Fashions for Playtime in Tropics

ANY self-respecting wardrobe that's going to be trundled down south should make allowance for all the nuances of tropical playtimes. For one day you'll want to be the lily-white northerner, cool and a bit remote, and very devastating. And the next day you'll be a hoyden all crisp at the edges and very young in printed linens. No smart girl keeps to one keynote or type these days, mot ever!

Left (a Fashion Congress selection modeled by Miss Margaret Swift) she's exquisitely textured white silk jersey for the sake of swift conquest. And she wears a big white baku hat, off the face, with brilliant grosgrain ribbons streaming down her back. There is devilish ingenuity in the drapery tricks the frock uses—see the handsome bodice, the front insert of fullness, the slim hipline. It's flared slightly in back, but ever so slightly. To be had in pastels luscious beyond imagining, with belts other than the scottie-decorated one shown.

Right (Mrs. Jack Berry models this winner) a blue linen, printed with white diamonds, accented with navy blue. And you'll carry out that navy blue note in shoes and hat for a real splurge in chic at what amounts to practically pin money. It is one of these frocks that is simply enough cut so that with sneakers and socks it reaches the limit of informality. But add cut-out sandals and a big tailored hat, and you're efficiently turned out for any summer afternoon of spectating.

For shopping information (white jersey around thirty-five dollars, blue linen around eight) phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Spring May Not Be Here But Lamb Is in Season

Don't Overlook Inexpensive 'Cuts'

FROM MARTHA LEE'S MONDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

ARE YOU waiting for Spring to serve lamb to your family? Strange as it may seem, the notion still persists that lamb is a seasonal meat and can be had only in the springtime.

Such an idea is old-fashioned and untrue. Lamb may be purchased in most markets at all seasons.

Many of us think of lamb only in terms of leg of lamb and lamb chops. By an doing, we overlook many delightful dishes enjoyed by the real epicure, which are made from other cuts of lamb.

Every time we buy leg and loin of lamb, we are making the other cuts more inexpensive for the discerning homemaker, who knows how to prepare these other cuts.

The delicate flavor of lamb is enjoyed by all. It combines well with all vegetables and all the fruits which the homemaker uses as an accompaniment to the main dish of the meal.

New methods of boning certain portions have added to the number of roasts offered for your approval by the market butcher.

Lamb is high in food value and is easily digested. It is an energy producing food. Lamb is an excellent choice for the family in which there are young children. This makes it unnecessary to provide "something extra" for the children.

BAKED LAMB RING
2 pounds ground uncooked lamb
1 cup milk or stock
1 egg
1 cup dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 green pepper, minced
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Combine all the ingredients thoroughly and pack into a greased ring mold. Bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for one hour. Turn out onto a chop plate and fill center with buttered carrots and peas. Garnish with parsley and quarters of tomatoes, or parsley potatoes.

ROAST SHOULDER OF LAMB
SPINACH STUFFING
4 to 5 pounds shoulder of lamb
½ pound spinach
4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons chopped celery
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon chopped onion
2 cups bread crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Have meat boned so that it can be stuffed. Wash, drain and chop spinach and cook it in half the butter together with celery, green pepper, and onion, just long enough to wilt it. Put this mixture to one side of pan, melt rest of butter in other side, add crumbs and mix all together. Add seasonings.

Fill meat with stuffing and sew or skewer opening. Rub with salt and pepper. Place on a rack in a baking pan, sear in a very hot oven (500 deg. F.), then reduce the heat to moderate (325 deg. F.) and continue cooking until meat is tender. Allow 30 to 35 minutes to the pound.

LAMB STEAK

Cut the steak crosswise from a leg of young lamb, and about inch to thickness. Season with salt and pepper, roll in oil and broil. Or saute in a pan with butter. Remove to hot platter and garnish with broiled tomato slices and broiled mushrooms.

Bridge

Hesitation Play

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Hesitation in following suit may be either highly unethical or downright stupid, depending on the situation.

If a defender hesitates to give declarer the impression he has a choice of plays when actually he holds only one card in the suit led, he is guilty of very bad ethics.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 N T	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened his fourth-best heart, dummy played low, and East's King won. Not being able to read the exact heart situation but hoping that West could force out dummy's only entry, East returned a heart.

Declarer won this trick and, counting that he would be able to make only two heart tricks, three diamonds, two clubs and one spade—a total of eight without establishing at least one other spade trick, he led the Ace and a low spade. On the second spade lead, West very foolishly hesitated as to whether or not he should go up with his King.

WITHOUT A DEFENSE

After the momentary hesitation, West properly ducked and the harm had been done. Dummy's Queen was put up, and after that no defense was possible.

This situation arises time and again, and correct play by a defender requires more than pure knowledge. Assuming the declarer to be a smart player, West must play low to the second trick with precisely the proper degree of nonchalance.

If he plays a low card with lightning rapidity, the declarer may look at it askance and decide that West was too innocent. If he hesitates, he is marked with the King, since to do so without the King would be tantamount to cheating.

Good Manners

AFTER DINNER TALK

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

How long should a hostess sit after a meal is finished? We had dinner the other evening at a friend's home and she remained at the table for more than an hour after we all had finished. We considered it very tiresome and is quite unusual.

E.

There isn't any rule about how long guests remain at table after dinner. Some hostesses rush their guests away from the table as soon as the dessert is over . . . especially if they are post-dinner entertainment plans, such as the theater or movies or bridge.

And then sometimes when the conversation is especially interesting and the table-tenor go charmingly along, some hostesses sense that an interruption would not be welcome and the stay at table is delightfully prolonged.

This longer stay at table is not "unusual," but it definitely should not be "tiresome." A perfect hostess would sense this tiresomeness and would end her dinner . . . that is, if she felt that all or the majority of the guests were bored.

However, people who don't especially enjoy talking about "this and that" who wish to "do something" rather than "talk something" would not, of course, enjoy the prolonged dinner-period, while other guests, to whom the art of conversation is a fine and thrilling art, would yearn to talk rather than to rush to the bridge table. One never can tell!

"Your Figure, Madame!"

TO DIET UNWISELY IS WEAKENING

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Copyright, 1937, King Features Synd., Inc.

THE MORE calories you can reduce on the better you will look and feel. That "reduced" look is never lovely.

A draw expression following an unnatural loss in weight means that you have been taking less than enough food to cover your basic requirements. No wonder you look all worn out!

Wrinkling and strain are due to starvation which has drained your vitality, rather than to the removal of excess fat from the face. The average reducer goes about this business from exactly the wrong angle.

She uses as few calories and as little exercise as possible. If you would reduce on a liberal calorie allowance and back this with exercise to improve your appearance, you would not only bring your figure down to normal but your health up to par.

I cannot overemphasize the cost of the starvation method of reducing, to your looks—to say nothing of your health. You lose your animated expression, your color and the smooth texture of your skin; but on a scientific plan you can grow slim beautifully.

To lose weight on an adequate

BALANCED REDUCING MENU

amount of food requires two things: Consistent exercise and sufficient time to reduce. You must take enough calories to feel well, and enough exercise to burn calories.

At one time or another, you may have "dieted" unwisely. For example, if you have a cup of black coffee for breakfast; fruit salad, a soda cracker, and tea for lunch; and a lamb chop, spinach, grapefruit and coffee at night, you are getting about 400 calories for the day.

As a minimum, the reducer needs 1000 calories a day, and to make up the deficit created by a 400 calorie diet you draw on your reserve to an extent that is weakening, and, if continued, dangerous.

Furthermore, on such a skimpy menu, you cannot get the proper iron, minerals and vitamins which supply health and protect your beauty. The sad part of it all is that you do lose weight, but you do not experience all at once the completely devastating effect of such a program. Gradually it dawns on you that you are fatigued most of the time, your disposition is in shreds, and you are not very happy about your looks, in spite of slimness.

You may think the daily menus are too conservative to be slimming, but on these menus you can lose from one to two pounds a week.

ANN MARSTERS

Said Irene Dunne who is the wife of Dr. Francis D. Griffin:

"I'll vote for marriage with all my heart. I know it has given me the balance and happiness which I need if I'm to do my best work."

Randolph Scott, who plays opposite Irene in "High, Wide and Handsome," is a newlywed and he said:

"Marriage has given me a home and interests aside from my work but I think I'm a more sincere actor because of those interests. I know I'd feel lost if I were a bachelor again."

Ida's for Romance But Not Marriage

Ida Lupino, the dynamic little English girl is all for romance—but not marriage.

"How can you play love scenes convincingly if the peak of your own romance is past?" she said. "I think an actress should always be in love—but not married."

Gary Cooper said, simply:

"I think I would have chucked this whole acting business if my wife, Sandra Shaw, hadn't come along."

Claudette Colbert said:

"An actress only needs to be happy and have confidence in herself to do her best as an actress. And I have never before been so happy." Claudette is the wife of Dr. Joel Pressman.

Fred MacMurray, Frances Dee, and Joe ... McCrea all rallied to the side of marriage ... we didn't go any farther. We concluded ... marriage won, by a landslide.

NOW, AFTER A LULL OF SEVERAL YEARS, during which both factions pulled their punches and treated each other with icy civility, Bill has busted the war wide open again. It seems that a New York editor ordered some press copies of Bill's pig and poultry ranch at Memphis, where he makes his winter residence. News was scarce and the editor wished to brighten his Sunday pages with a frolicsome account, illustrated with real life photos, of Bill in his native habitat.

PRIVACY HIS MANIA

BILL IS CORRECT IN OBJECTING. It is the unfortunable right of every American to submit to being photographed or not, as he chooses. Whoever wins, wins on merit alone. Hello Everybody! This is Fred Hoey Speaking!

Although the scoring rules state specifically that catchers are charged with stolen bases by opponents, how often have we observed careless pitchers give the runner such a lead off a base that the catcher has little chance to throw him out?

FRED HOEY

Great catchers of the past, such as Bill Madden, Eddie Ainsmith, Val Picinich, Buddy Hartnett, Al Lopez, Jimmy Wilson, Luke Sewell and Ray Schalk, were artists at throwing out would-be base stealers, and their records for even these outstanding catchers are helpless when a pitcher permits a runner to get a big lead. Haney on Stock Market

Securities Due

FOR NEW HIGHS

Before Reaction

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Jan. 18—Although there are plenty of economic and political troubles, it has come to look more than ever as if those who, in November, expected a large reaction in the stock market were unduly alarmed.

The market closed the week ended January 16 at a level very close to the November peak.

The gain made last week was not a large one, as measured in the number of points rise in the averages.

The outstanding fact, however, is that in the midst of so many threatening conditions and so much profit-taking and cautious selling there should have been any gain at all.

This point is emphasized by the fact that last week's gain represents a consolidation of the considerable gains made in the preceding week.

The total volume of trading last week was large and much above that of the week before. Under some circumstances, this would be a bearish symptom, since it shows a price movement not in proportion to volume.

At present, however, I think it represents capacity to absorb a good deal of selling. It also reflects the large amount of shifting of position from one stock to another.

The final upturn on Saturday had the appearance of a definite penetration of the resistance level that halted the rise a week ago and held the market down during the following days. The upturn was accompanied by large volume and many new highs.

This was notably true of steel stocks, with U. S. Steel up 2½ points to a new high and one of the four most active stocks.

Among the many new highs made, the outstanding groups were railway equipments, building materials, tires, steels, chemicals and certain "specialties."

American Agricultural Chemical (fertilizers), Spiegel and Mohawk Carpet were notable in the last two groups.

* * *

While there is little that is new in the way of additional factors, it seems fair to say that changes in the line-up of market forces are mostly favorable to the rise.

The truce in the Lewis strike against General Motors warrants hope for a peaceful settlement.

Developments indicate that Lewis is likely to suffer a set-back. He has antagonized labor outside his own C. I. O. He has shown that his claims to membership are exaggerated. He has been forced to back down on the "sit-down" issue.

This leads to the belief that a tie-up of the steel industry may be avoided.

* * *

The utilities have become more active at rising prices, and made a new high average as a group. (This suggests hope of fairer treatment by President Roosevelt.)

In view of industrial activity and prices, the earnings of the fourth quarter should be good, and the early publication of favorable earnings statements may help the market.

The market appears to be gaining momentum on the up side. With relatively large volume and number of issues traded in, the majority of stocks showed gains in the last three days; activity is clearly concentrated on the bull side.

In this connection, I feel sure that the public is in the market more heavily than for a long while. Eventually this means danger. For the present, it means more activity in lower-priced speculative issues.

* * *

Signs of boom times continue to appear, this growing public participation being one of them.

Another is the run-up in copper prices and the spurt in the copper shares.

Still another is the move now begun under the leadership of a jump in U. S. Steel.

The first faint suggestions that some day money rates will rise and credit will become strained, may also be mentioned.

* * *

For the present, however, my guess is that (1) the market will move up to a new high in the near future; and that (2) a sharp and considerable reaction (perhaps by March) will then come, (3) to be followed by a resumption of the bull market on a bigger scale than before.

Electrical equipment, machinery, railway equipment, oil, farm equipment, building supplies, steel, tire and automobile accessory stocks seem to furnish the most likely buying opportunities at the moment.

FURTHER Improvement ASSURED

STEEL ENJOYS FINE MONTH

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

(Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service.)

New York, Jan. 18—It will be misleading to read January business statistics without making allowances for cessation of work in General Motors plants and other sit-down incidents.

In the figures already available, which reflect the anticipation of strikes, there was only a moderate easing off in general economic activity, which at the turn of the year was at approximately the peak of the recovery movement.

Best Since 1929

Apart from labor disturbances and the fears of adverse legislation, the favorable setting continues favorable to further improvement.

As a matter of fact, the rate of activity in steel has been extraordinary, and the annals must be searched all the way back to 1929 for as busy a January.

The high level of activity, with which January got under way, followed a record breaking December, and the best fall year since 1929.

The belated pickup in heavy goods enabled the steel industry to reveal a 40 per cent gain over 1935.

If industrial peace prevails, the buying of steel by the automobile and canning industries will be supplemented by heavy orders from the railroads, utilities and the building trades.

Union Tests

The state of balance as between agriculture and industry, and within the general price structure, is favorable to further expansion.

The chief concern in the minds of executives has to do with human aspects of business—labor relations, wages and political prospects.

There is a general feeling that there is definitely on the schedule further tests of power with union leadership.

If out of these incidents come higher wage costs, there undoubtedly will be a further spur in the search for automatic machinery and improved technique, for it must be borne in mind, too, that in 1937 the cost of labor began to rise further in connection with the payroll taxes of the Social Security Act.

Unless the effect is to be deleterious, these added costs must be absorbed in improved productivity. Accordingly, superior management will be at a greater premium than ever before.

Flux, The Law

Long term comparisons of retail sales are rendered difficult on account of price changes and variations in the character of merchandise sought.

That is the trouble with most long term statistical series. They are based on the assumption of a static situation, whereas flux is the essential law of business.

In dollar volume, retail sales were 12 per cent larger in 1936 than in 1935, reflecting further re-employment and further pickup in the national income.

The 1936 total stood at 79 per cent of the 1929 level.

Whereas department stores were back to about the 1931 level, mail order houses set new peaks in 1936, and variety shops did the best dollar volume since 1929.

HIGHER Dollar Value LOOMS

MARKET IGNORES IT

By BROADAN WALL

Distributed U. S. Patent Office

In a period of broad stock market optimism such as the present few people have any use for unfavorable factors. That is why the great majority of people interested in the market see only the bright side.

From last week's strength in stocks one might have supposed there were no clouds on the horizon. The fact is there are many clouds.

Indeed, a very ominous cloud was gathering but few observed this. Almost everyone today agrees that the bull market which has now run for more than four years really had its inception in our devaluation, or cheapening, of the dollar. Even the rise in stock prices during the second half of 1932, was largely in anticipation of the suspension of the dollar from gold upon the assumption of office by the Roosevelt administration.

The present market got its second great inspiration after the Supreme Court placed its definite approval on the cheapening of the dollar. Then every capitalist in this country and the whole world knew for the first time there was no possibility of a return for years to the old value for the dollar.

Everything of wealth in the United States has been in the process of being adjusted to the dollar's new value.

What is the situation today with respect to the dollar?

The whole world has been rushing its liquid money to this country. In other words, there has been a world-wide demand for the dollar. Only the strenuous efforts of the Roosevelt group have kept the dollar from booming in its international value.

That is, the dollar wants to go up and the whole world would be willing to pay more for the American money. But there is in existence today a so-called stabilization agreement which ties the United States to do everything in its power to prevent the dollar from appreciating.

The dollar has to be held down by these great money pools. Just last week our Secretary of the Treasury repeated our allegiance to this stabilization.

If the natural forces now at work in the world seem to indicate quite definitely that the dollar cannot be held down, even by the billions of dollars in the money pools.

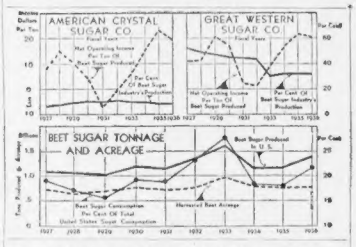
If the stabilization pact ends, one certain result would be an immediate rise in the dollar. Isn't it only logical to assume that if the dollar rises, some part of the effects of the previous dollar-cheapening would thus be cancelled? The lower value for the dollar must have been at least partly responsible for both of stocks and commodities.

* * *

Buying of stocks last week continued quite enthusiastically. Nothing has happened of a higher dollar nor the other adverse factors had any influence. The buying enthusiasm reached such a degree that dealing on several days soared above three million shares. Considering the higher margins this is equivalent possibly in a market of more than five million shares in former times.

Beet Sugar Industry



COSTIGAN ACT

Consumption, Production Decline

In 1933 beet sugar production in the United States reached the peak of 1,642,000. Likewise the number of acres harvested reached an all-time high of 985,000.

The following year, 1934, the Jones-Costigan Act was passed by Congress making sugar a basic commodity.

A quota was set up for the beet sugar industry of 1,142,000 short tons of refined sugar. Further provision was made that as consumption of sugar increased in the United States the quota of beet sugar would be increased proportionately. During the three crop years, 1934, 1935 and 1936, a combination of circumstances prevented the industry from producing its quota.

Under the Jones-Costigan Act, beet sugar acreage was reduced to cut down surplus and the crop from the acres that were planted was further reduced by drouth.

Another factor that has affected the beet sugar industry is the decline in consumption of beet sugar. In 1935 consumption of beet sugar, expressed as a percentage of the United States, was 18 per cent, the lowest figure since 1929. It is estimated that beet sugar consumption this year will be about 21 per cent of total consumption of all kinds of sugar.

In addition to statistics of the beet sugar industry the chart shows the net operating income and production record of two large refining beet sugar companies.

Apparently the decline in beet sugar consumption and production has not affected their net operating income. American Crystal Sugar Company in 1935 had a net operating income of $23.17 per ton of beet sugar produced and Great Western Sugar Company had a net of $21.92.

STEEL Rate BRISK

DESPITE LABOR TROUBLES

Steel mill operations are continuing at a brisk rate, despite labor troubles in the automobile industry, states the magazine Steel.

Pointing out that operations were at 79 per cent of capacity last week, against 79½ per cent in the preceding week, the publication says:

"Effects of suspensions of steel shipments to General Motors Corp. and other consumers affected by labor difficulties have been negligible.

STEEL OUTLETS

"Mills have sufficient outlets for delivery to absorb more than the deferred tonnage.

"In some cases steel makers feel sufficient confidence in an early settlement of the strike to continue production of steel on specifications for automobile users to be prepared to ship promptly when need arises."

Increased buying of scrap by important domestic steel producers indicates "confidence that heavy demand for steel is likely to continue for some time," asserts Steel, adding:

"Quiet buying of scrap by large steelmakers in the Pittsburgh and Buffalo districts has been done under cover, only selected dealers being given tonnage. A Pittsburgh purchase is reported to involve 35,000 to 40,000 tons and it is believed 870 was paid for No. 1 heavy melting, with $20.50 for railroad steel.

FOREIGN BUYING

Commenting on foreign purchases of scrap, the publication says:

"Buying of scrap for export is increasing in the East and prices for that purpose have been advanced 50 cents. Italy and Japan are reported to be the principal foreign buyers."

Gordon will be in charge of merchandising and sales promotion plans for Doremus and Company. He is a former vice-president and director of the Advertising Club of Boston and is author of a number of books on the relationship between sales and advertising.

Edson will act as merchandising consultant and account executive for Doremus and Company. Also author of several text boks on his profession, he is a graduate of Brown University, with wide experience in the advertising and merchandising field.

Manville to Offer More Common

Johns-Manville Corp. announced it plans to issue 100,000 additional shares of no-par common stock to be available for subscription by holders of common stock in ratio of one new share for each 7½ shares held. It is expected that the price will be $100 a share, thus realizing to the company $10,000,000 less expenses of issue.

The money to be derived from issuance of the additional shares will be used for working capital of the company and its subsidiaries and for expansion of manufacturing and operating facilities.

If present plan is proceeded with application to register the new shares with the Securities and Exchange Commission and to list them on the New York Stock Exchange will shortly be made.

More Industrial Job Placements

Verified placements in private industry during 1936 by U. S. Employment Service were 1,510,463, a gain of 26.4 per cent over 1935 and the highest in any year since the present service began operations in July, 1933, Secretary of Labor Perkins reported.

Job replacements of all types totaled 5,090,000, according to preliminary reports. These included 2,212,998 in public non-relief employment and 1,366,538 on relief work. The service registered 4,259,914 new applications during the year.

December private placements were 172,354, a record for one month and a gain of 185.1 per cent over December, 1935.

N. E. POWER

Increases CONSTRUCTION Budgets

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Tangible evidence of further improvement in general business and the utility industry in particular is found in the 1937 construction budgets of New England Power Association subsidiaries.

According to an announcement of Frank D. Comerford, chairman of the Association's board of directors, the budgeted figure of $7,500,000 is 50 per cent larger than last year.

While the 1937 figure is only in the nature of an estimate of probable spending it is to be noted that the company came within 1 per cent of budget spending matters last year. Of the amount set up for construction in the current 12-month period, about $6,000,000 will go to expenditures on electrical properties alone, an increase over the 1936 figure of 66 per cent. The entire territory served by the company will be affected and principal construction work will be undertaken in the transmission, distribution and utilization fields.

The rising trend of capital expenditures by utilities is not confined to the New England area, however. Major units the country over feel the need for increasing capacities, in order to meet the mounting demand for electricity. Growing consumption is literally forcing enlargement of generating, transmission and distribution facilities. Which means that the rising demand for higher types of equipment, already in evidence, should also occur in nearby lines. As the Brookmire Analyst points out today, these factors enhance the outlook for electrical equipment profits. In fact, an exceedingly profitable period is assumed by the servers,

Stop Recruiting in America for Spanish Communism!

OVERWHELMING evidence accumulates every day that recruiting for the Red Government of Spain is going on on the soil of the United States.

This is in violation of the Federal Criminal Code (Title 22, Section 10) which lays a FINE OF $1000 AND IMPRISONMENT FOR THREE YEARS against any person who hires or retains another person to enlist in the service of a foreign country as a soldier or a sailor.

The Hearst papers recently exposed the attempts made here to recruit American fiers for the Communistic Spanish Government.

Four American fliers returning from Spain — Bert Acosta, Frederick Lord, Gordon Berry and Eddie Schneider, known as the "Yankee Squadron"—are being or will be questioned by G-Men as they land here as to WHO DID THE RECRUITING HERE.

An American mother, last week, laid before United States Attorney Hardy evidence that her son, a young seaman, had been recruited for Spain by groups claiming association with the "North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy."

* * *

ABOUT the same time John Howard Lawson, well-known radical playwright, announced openly that, as a member of the "American Society for Technical Aid to Spanish Democracy," he was seeking American workmen to send to Spain to relieve the workers there for MILITARY DUTY.

He pleads for funds to send steel workers, automobile workers and miners "so democracy shall survive."

Officers and members of this "society" to establish Communism in Spain with American aid are Waldo Frank, William E. Browder, Van Wyck Brooks, Malcolm Cowley, Ben Gold, Lewis Mumford and George Sklar.

This Committee recruits directly for MILITARY PURPOSES in violation of the Federal Criminal Code, for a statement made by Mr. Lawson says that each American worker "WILL FREE ONE SPANISH WORKER TO JOIN THE MILITARY FORCES OF HIS OWN COUNTRY."

NOTE that this recruiting is allegedly going on for "Spanish Democracy." There is NO SUCH THING in Spain and has not been since the Reds and the Anarchists seized power and made Caballero, a pawn of Soviet Russia, their Premier.

These people in America are recruiting for SPANISH COMMUNISM — for that BRUTAL COMMUNISM which shot down nuns and priests and burned innocent people alive and which has committed all kinds of hideous crimes while in power.

These recruiters DARE NOT tell the truth. They have to lie to their victims of course because the brutality of Communism is such that no one dares admit adherence to it.

But these recruiters should NOT BE ALLOWED TO PROSTITUTE THE NAME OF DEMOCRACY.

Anyone who fights for Communism is fighting for the ARCH ENEMY OF DEMOCRACY.

The first duty of democracy is to DEFEND ITSELF AGAINST COMMUNISM.

These recruiters are wolves in sheeps' clothing.

They are frauds and liars because the truth would damn them as enemies of the democracy they profess to serve.

Real democracy in Spain is fighting against Communism just as it is in America, and just as it must do for self-protection EVERYWHERE.

WE CAN take a lesson from Switzerland, a real democracy and the oldest in the world.

An Associated Press despatch from Zurich says that "FOUR PERSONS WERE ARRESTED TODAY WHEN POLICE RAIDED AN OFFICE SUSPECTED OF RECRUITING VOLUNTEERS FOR THE SPANISH SOCIALISTS."

Little Switzerland knows how to ENFORCE HER NEUTRALITY.

The great democracy can do no less.

Washington should immediately investigate ~~the~~ these RECRUITING AGENCIES FOR RUSSO-SPANISH COMMUNISM.

A Vital Necessity

THE Bay State, aviation pioneer, long to the front in the development and supervision of flying, now lags.

Some time ago, the Advisory Board of Aeronautics, headed by Paul S. Bauer, recommended to the Public Works Commission the IMMEDIATE purchase of an airplane to be assigned to the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

We hope the recommendation has not fallen on deaf ears. Though millions could be found for less useful public services, nothing has yet been done.

The airplane, as visioned by Mr. Bauer, is an ABSOLUTE NECESSITY, not in any sense a wasteful experiment.

Without it, there can be no really efficient enforcement of State air traffic rules.

No wholly State-operated, State-conducted patrolling of forest lands.

No immediate transportation of emergency materials SOLELY by the State during disasters, such as in the recent floods.

No maximum efficiency in the State Police at times when every second counts.

Massachusetts, whose air prowess was once so outstanding that even the Federal Government imitated our legislation, cannot afford to delay longer.

Twenty-two States own and operate airplanes. Maine has two. Connecticut has three. We, WITHOUT ANY, ought to wake up.

Let's Save Our Children

MASSACHUSETTS legislators who value the lives of their own children and other people's children should support the bill that has been filed on Beacon Hill by Boston Representative John J. Craven.

This measure, similar in text to the law proposed in the United States Senate by Senator Ashurst of Arizona, prohibits payment of ransoms to criminals in kidnaping cases.

How, in view of the lamentable and tragical outcomes of the Lindbergh and Mattson abductions, any Senator or Representative could for a single minute oppose adoption of such a law is beyond belief.

The facts speak for themselves, no argument possible. America, without such legislation, has been the notorious scene of activity for the kidnap - murderer. Canada, with such legislation, has been practically free from this outrage.

And, significantly, in the Canadian Labatt kidnaping the victim was returned ALIVE when the abductors found they could obtain no money.

Truly, Senator Ashurst's warning, that "in countries which make it a crime to pay ransom to kidnapers, kidnaping IS ALMOST UNKNOWN," is as applicable to Massachusetts as to the other forty-seven States.

The lives and safety of little children are TOO IMPORTANT to be made the subject of political controversy. REPRESENTATIVE CRAVEN'S BILL SHOULD PASS, THE SOONER THE BETTER.

Lodge Seeks Census

MASSACHUSETTS' new Senator, Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., believing that legislative "freshmen" should be heard as well as seen, has tackled a man-sized problem.

His first bill in the United States Senate is a demand for a nationwide unemployment census.

Says Senator Lodge:

"It is vitally necessary that we have full knowledge of, all the facts in order to make plans that will work and in order to expend money intelligently."

That argument is too logical to be disputed.

To aid the jobless by first ascertaining their identity and number would seem a duty transcending party lines.

Knights War On Reds

COMMUNISM on the North American continent is a very live issue.

The small vote polled by the Stalinites in the last election is not conclusive evidence of their retirement from the United States.

With these two thoughts in mind, New England Knights of Columbus join their brothers throughout the nation and Canada in the greatest movement against Communism yet made on this side of the Atlantic.

Loyal patriots — citizens that appreciate the freedom which is theirs in constitutional America—the Knights should be encouraged in their crusade,

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

The airplane crash in which Martin Johnson, noted explorer, was killed, started him on his greatest exploration. But it is one on which he cannot take any moving pictures and from which he cannot return to tell of the wonders he has seen.

Will he find in exploring a world not living eyes have ever seen the lions, the elephants and other wild animals his wife shot down when they charged his camera?

Is immortality reserved for man or does he share it with his animal friends?

Martin Johnson was the kind of big game hunter who is a credit to civilization. He hunted with a camera, rather than a gun. He was actuated, not by a savage lust to kill for the thrill of killing, but by a desire to learn more about the wild life of the earth and to share his knowledge with others.

He will be remembered for a long time for his contributions to human knowledge of rapidly vanishing wild animal life.

There is some opposition to the billion dollar appropriation proposed for our Army and Navy. It is more than we have been spending. But it is small compared with the four billions set aside in the Russian budget for defense.

One thing we should keep in mind is that the nation which does not prepare to defend itself before it is attacked will have no opportunity to prepare after it is attacked.

Often we are reminded that "it takes two to make a quarrel." From that we are supposed to infer there is no danger of war to us unless we want to fight. But one nation, determined to take something from another, can start a war at any time.

A defenseless country, unprepared to defend itself, can expect to be robbed.

Diplomats at Berlin are still wondering why they were requested to wear black vests with their evening dress at Hitler's New Year reception. Black waistcoats with "tails," they say, are the customary garb of waiters.

Maybe that is what Hitler had in mind. Foreign representatives in Germany have been playing a waiting role much of the time, waiting to find out what he is going to do next to threaten the peace of Europe.

There are many different ideas for "saving" the nation and promoting the welfare of the people. More than 2000 bills were dumped into the legislative hopper at the opening of Congress. Many more are yet to come. Legislation proposed covers almost everything from a national referendum before a declaration of war to a $2,000,000,000 national lottery to promote prosperity. If some continuance during the campaign, advocated these things they would later in Congress, they never would get to Washington, D. C.

American investors are buying "baby bonds" of the United States government at the rate of more than 100 million dollars a day. Since March 1, 1935, more than 700,000 persons have purchased 600 million dollars of these securities. Small savers since interest rates on savings accounts are so low, need opportunities to invest the accumulations of their thrift. "Baby bonds," offering safety and tax exemption, naturally are attractive.

"No Hasty Pudding"

By Nelse Harding

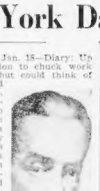
No half-baked dishes this time, chef,
Not too much in the pot.
Don't spoil the broth, and try to have
The oven not too hot.

A sure, slow fire in your stove
Will prove to be the best
For cooking me a simple meal
And one I can digest."

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Jan. 18—Diary: Up with a decision to chuck work for the day but could think of nothing I'd rather do. Came a replica of our Ohio house done entirely in candy on a giant cake by John Hoegan, chef and a gay note from Lyn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt autographed volume of William Saroyan's new tome.



O. O. McIntyre

In the afternoon Frank Crowninshield came along with a dazzling print of George Seurat's painting of the Grand Jatte, that wooded island on the Seine where I have so often picnicked. So later with my lady to Lawrence and Jane Tibbett's tea and a mighty buzz of headline folk.

Dined at the Stork Club and Ely Culbertson told me of a new two-handed card game he invented. So talking to Sherman Billingsley, now a Thin Man again, an accomplishment for a restauranteur with a banker for food. Then to my lodgings reading the abdication edition of the London Times Basil Woon sent over.

When Gelett Burgess is stuck for something to say to the Bright Young Thing on his left at a dinner he always asks if she knows where Lilliput and Brobdingnag are. The first edition of Gulliver's Travels had maps which showed Lilliput to be an island southwest of Sumatra, Brobdingnag—if Swift had been a geologist he would have left out that first n—wasn't an island but almost. It was a peninsula on the western coast of America about where Vancouver is and was connected with the mainland by a narrow isthmus.

Bob Davis has been having the time of his gadding life trailing the trailer. One day several weeks ago he became conscious that the great part of America —and an interesting part—was living the modern covered wagon life. So he entrained to Chicago, secured a trailer and joined the westward safari, taking to the open road by day and bivouacking wherever night came on. He ran across every type of American, former bankers, painters, sculptors, authors and those merely ebarked by a new focus of vagabondage. He will winnow a book out of his experiences. One of these by-the-side-of-the-road things.

Sudden thought: What a wonderful city New York would be without hat snatching; girls who smoke along the streets, masters of ceremony, phony celebrities and present tense talkers?

New York has recently been entertaining the foremost—and one of the few—Cajun writers. He is Charles Martin, a Clark Gable looking fellow, from the southern part of Louisiana, where the Cajuns have lived all their lives. He explodes the fallacies that Cajuns have Negro blood and are sub-normal. He does admit they speak a low form of French and are lazy and shiftless. His idea of the Cajuns is that they are merely ordinary hill-billies, speaking a foreign tongue.

Glancing about in a Schrafft restaurant the other evening I saw a lady at a table twirling a chain looped about her neck. She wore glasses. I saw a man with his foot jiggling. He wore glasses. I saw a girl twiddling her fork. She wore glasses. I saw a stripling scratching his face. He wore glasses. A fop fingered his lapel floret. He wore glasses. It is not at all nicely glasses had anything to do with the nervous gesturing. But it struck me as an interesting observation, just the same.

Bagtelles: Chic Sale had signed up to do a daily syndicate paragraph two days before his fatal illness . . . Pearl Buck likes to write by the light of a coal oil lamp . . . The notorious Nickey Arnstein is reported backing a Broadway night club . . . His wife is reputedly worth $2,000,000 . . . Dwight Fiske has been convulsing the sophisticates with his pianologue "Dear Diary," using initials instead of actual names . . . John Murray Anderson, the director, has 10 black cats in his avenue penthouse . . . Finley Peter Dunne never answered fan letters.

Irvin Cobb, who has been a plain and fancy eater for many years, has gone on a diet and eats, in comparison to other days, very sparingly. He waits over the new regime but is hewing to the line. Recently he was dawdling over a favorite dish and sighed to his hostess: "I've about quit eating." Then added: "But I'm still ahead."

Sudden coming on of a poem:

No lovelier shirts have ever flowered
Than those that decorate Roy Howard;
But ties that race him nip and tuck
Are often flaunted by Frank Buck.

Science to the Rescue!

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

A young married couple I know were planning a house. The man was moaning because, no matter what one pays, a new house always costs at least 40 per cent more than the original estimate. After days of this, the wife bobbed up with a bright idea.

"I don't know what's the matter," said she. "There's an easy way to get around that. We just won't make any original estimate."

That's an appropriate sentiment, too, for New Year's predictions. All the soothsayers get in all their heavy-hitting at this time of the year, and the fact is that they might just as well use a crystal ball as their charts and indices. Filtering casually into the news is the story of Dr. W. F. Gericke of the University of California, growing tomato plants, 15 feet tall, and big, fruit-laden strawberry plants, without any soil.

That's away inside in the paper, while estimates of farm production and all the agricultural horoscopes get prominent plays. Already scientific magazines are printing articles about "the doom of the farmer." Ever since man began to get an inch or two up above the animal level, a look or more than a few days ahead has been tricky business. Our continuous outreach for new energies and new techniques has successively upset every prediction ever made.

SOLVED BY SCIENCE

Just at the start of the World War, a Swiss scientist, writing "above the battle," with great detachment, proved up to the hilt that Germany could not possibly win a long war because she had no nitrates and the British navy could bar her from the Chilean supply. Her supply of nitrates did fail, but, all of a sudden, there was the scientific magician, Haber, conjuring them out of thin air.

In this same war, chemistry, airplanes and motor transport reduced to shreds whole libraries of military tactics. In war or peace, these days, no man safely prophesies beyond the length of his nose. The pulations of the Nile were the life-blood of Egypt, and the ancient priests and horologers who figured centuries instead of minutes could get a rough idea of probable economic conditions when they made their New Year's predictions. But elsewhere and in other ages man has been ruled by errant and whimsical gods. History may repeat itself, but a safer rule seems to be that anything can happen, and probably will.

THE CHANCE ELEMENT

The mould of prophesy may be cracked by undreamed forces. Two weeks ago, the betting was all on France in Spain. Then he committed the faux pas of grabbing the Rio Tinto copper mines. That has put a different face on world affairs—on the world crisis.

The accident of Disraeli's suave influence with Victoria Regina may have had more to do with empire building than gunpowder. It was an accident that gave Surgeon General Wood news of the approach of British ships and enabled us to get our flag up in California just a jump ahead of them.

This new chemical agriculture may, or may not, be one of those incalculable things which bob up like the double O on the roulette wheel when you have everything else covered and think you can't lose. It has been coming to a head for the last three years, not only in this country but in Denmark, Germany and England. In a fig not much bigger than a refrigerator, they have stirred up their chemicals, supplied uniform artificial light and heat, and grown perfectly edible tomatoes, beans, cabbages and other vegetables.

Around 15 tons to the acre is a fair yield of tomatoes. With no acreage to speak of and no soil at all, Dr. Gericke has produced 200 tons of the highest quality of tomatoes, which scientists analyze and find lacking in no vitamins or nourishing element.

FORECASTS UPSET

As far back as Paracelsus, in the fifteenth century, scientists have been worrying about modern agriculture upsetting the balance of nature. Huxley of England, has been losing sleep over it. We set out banquets for bugs in our green fields and gardens and enable creatures to survive which, in the general free-for-all, would have been eliminated by their more ferocious enemies.

Dr. L. O. Howard, former head of the Bureau of Entomology of the Department of Agriculture, has been intoning for years the quite probable conquest of man by the insects.

How much would his predictions amount to, and he was certainly a justified prophet, if the kitchen conjurers bring through their synthetic, soilless, sunless vegetables, as they promised to do?

And what about Stuart Chase and other irrefutable prophets who foreshadow our doom because we have looted the soil?

We may not need any soil, is the answer to that.

Bible Text: "The world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."—St. John 6:17.
